Grand Jury Asks Fulton Car Sale Delay

SOME AUTOS SOLD AFTER LETTER ASKS PLAN BE HALTED

Commissioner Adams Presses for Information But Chairman Almand Parries His Replies.

County-owned automobiles—private use of which raised a storm of protest after a near-fatal accident three weeks ago—were sold yesterday, under a plan of county commissioners for their disposal to employees, despite existence of a letter from Thomas C. Law, foreman of the grand jury, to Ed L. Almand, chairman of the commissioners, urging that no action should be taken on the plan before at least September 1.

The letter was mailed Tuesday by Mr. Law, but nothing was said of its existence yesterday by Almand, although Commissioner Charles Ross Adams pressed at a meeting of the commissioners for information concerning the present status of the automobile disposal program.

Almand could not be reached for comment last night, after existence of the letter from the grand jury became known. It was reported that the cars disposed of numbered six of the total 111 owned by the county.

Letter Urged Delay.
Mr. Law's letter, in which he spoke for the grand jury, urged withdrawal of all proposed sales until "the matter can be looked into in an intelligent way." His minimum proposal was that the date of August 15 for beginning of the plan should be changed to September 1.

The precise proposal, under which the automobiles were sold yesterday, was that they should be purchased by county employees at a figure fixed by three separate appraisers and then used by the employees on a mileage basis in so far as their official duties were concerned.

Further ventilation of the county-owned automobile situation is slated for today when the grand jury will have before it Commissioners Almand and J. A. Ragsdale, County Police Chief George Mathieson and Al Martin, county gasoline inspector.

Dr. Adams Tuesday had contended that the commissioners neglected to invite him to the conference because he had opposed the plan especially as applied to the police department.

"I would like to know the status of the automobiles since the conference which I did not attend," Adams said when Ralph Moody sought to obtain a concession for the gasoline filling station in the

Fortune-Telling Parrot

Misses His Own Future

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(AP)—A whistling parrot who helps his owner, Dominick Palugi, 77, run a fortune-telling business by picking the fateful cards for patrons, couldn't foresee his own future.

The parrot and Palugi were given a one-day jail sentence for pecking without a license. Blackie perched on a cell bar and whistled "My Time Is Your Time."

'Did It Without Souping'

MAJ. GEN. H. H. ARNOLD.

ARMY PLANES SET 6 WORLD RECORDS

Anniversary Feat Made Without 'Souping Up,' Air Corps Chief Says.

By The Associated Press.
Droning motors of army warplanes dramatized the 30th birthday of military aviation in spectacular fashion yesterday.

Officials estimated that more than 1,500 ships of the army's fast expanding air forces roared over cities all over the nation on the anniversary of the War Department purchase of the first frail machine from the Wright brothers in 1909.

Almost simultaneously a "super flying fortress" bomber, one of the world's largest, set new international marks for speed and altitude, increasing to six the world records to be claimed by the air corps in a week of tests. Ten national marks were established in the same period.

Major General H. H. Arnold, chief of the air corps, told a luncheon meeting at Wright Field, Dayton, "we have done this without 'souping up' our engines, without putting alcohol in our gasoline."

Oil Tanker On Fire In Ocean, Sends SOS

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 2.—(AP)—The oil tanker Bunkwa flashed a distress call tonight, stating she was afire and her regular radio operator had suffered two broken legs. The ship's mate, pressed into service as an emergency operator, had not given the distressed craft's position more than two hours after the SOS was broadcast.

Coast guardsmen tried desperately to contact him and get him to state the ship's position. The cutter Mojave, with steam up, was ready to put to sea as soon as the approximate location could be learned.

SEC Inquiry Looks Toward Halting Germans From Bond Issue in U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—(AP)—The SEC's action followed an announcement last Saturday by the Commerce Department that recent dispatches indicated an "increasing strain on the economic resources of Germany."

Only $35,000,000 of the securities were to have been issued at this time, an SEC official said. The balance were to have been issued to meet interest payments due in the United States during the next four years. Under German law, no cash may be sent out of the Reich to meet such obligations.

In a statement, the German embassy said the demands for information were such that "no sovereign government" could submit to them.

CABINET DEFEATS COMMONS REVOLT ON CRISIS FEARS

Chamberlain Wins Vote of Confidence on Issue of Adjournment, Opposition Fearing Appeasement.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—(AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain overrode a minor revolt within his own party tonight, won a 250-to-132 vote of confidence and pushed through his motion to adjourn parliament for two months beginning Friday.

Liberals and Laborites, supported by a group of "anti-appeasement" Conservatives, including Winston Churchill, war-time cabinet minister, had attempted to have the house of commons reassemble August 21 for a one-day session because of the critical international situation.

The opposition members expressed fears Chamberlain might return to his policy of appeasement as soon as parliament was out of the way. They recalled that they were in recess at the time of the Munich agreement last September.

Worse Than 1938.

Churchill painted a gloomy picture of the European situation, describing it as "graver than this time last year"—on the eve of the crisis over Czechoslovakia.

He said masses of German troops now were gathered all along the Polish border "and every preparation is being made for a speedy advance."

The prime minister contended, however, the government was ready for any emergency and there was no need to have the members of parliament break their vacations except in case of unexpected developments. In that event he said the members would be called back.

Reassemble October 3.

He made the opposition amendment a question of confidence and after its defeat the government's adjournment motion was passed, 245 to 129. It provided that the house reassemble October 3.

While Germany celebrated her mobilization for the World War just 25 years ago today—an event never before observed in post-war Germany—Italy's army of the Po took up positions 60 miles from the French border, ready to unleash a counter-offensive tomorrow designed to destroy the forces of an imaginary invader.

Nazi leaders used the mobilization.

Deadbeat Bus Rider

Pays 10-Year-Old Fare

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., Aug. 2.—(AP)—A 10-year-old case of conscience brought $8 in an anonymous letter to the Schuylkill Transportation Company with this explanation: "It is in payment of riding your bus lines, 10 or more years ago, without paying the fare. But only one evening. I think the fare was not this much, but I'd better pay too much than too little."

There's Work for Everyone at Historic Camp Ground

W. H. KETTIG DIES AT 76 IN FLORIDA

Ex-Chairman of Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta Succumbs on Vacation.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 3 (Thursday).—(AP)—W. H. Kettig, 76, Birmingham, Ala., financier and former chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, died shortly after midnight today of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Kettig was stricken July 23 at fashionable Ponte Vedra Beach, where he was vacationing.

Survivors include two children, William H. Kettig Jr. and Mrs. J. Reese Murray, who were both at the hospital and had been with him since he was stricken.

W. H. Kettig, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, a highly successful and wealthy manufacturer known in business and financial circles throughout the south, who made his home in Birmingham, died in Jacksonville early this morning of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mr. Kettig, who was 76 years old, had not failed to attend a meeting of the board of directors of the bank, of which he was a charter member, until his retirement in 1937.

He had diverse business interests, not only in the south, but of great national scope. One of these was the manufacture of bath tubs. His factory, which pioneered in development of possibilities of the field, was absorbed by the Crane Company, now regarded as dominant.

Great regret was expressed by his associates upon his passing.

"It is a great personal loss to me and I know this is true of many in the banking field of Atlanta, the south and the nation," Haynes MacFadden, editor of The Southern Banker, declared this morning. "His passing will be felt in many quarters."

Mr. Kettig was stricken July 23 at the fashionable Ponte Vedra Beach, where he was vacationing. Survivors include two children, William H. Kettig Jr. and Mrs. J. Reese Murray. Both were at the hospital and had been with him when stricken.

Salem Camp Meeting To Open Today

Century-Old Mecca Readied for 10-Day Religious Session.

By LUKE GREENE.

SALEM CAMP GROUND, Ga., Aug. 2.—This century-old mecca of Georgia Methodists teemed with activity today as religious folk of all denominations and from many parts of the state moved in for the annual 10-day camp meeting which opens tomorrow.

Sharp raps of hammers and the hum of saws rang through the rolling countryside as workmen hurried to complete new cottages (or tents) and have them ready for occupation tomorrow.

Trucks and automobiles packed with beds and furniture and food rumbled into the camp ground, rolled up to the tents and were unloaded. Whole families come to camp meetings—mothers, fathers, children and all.

Inside the tents there was the smell of fresh hay and sawdust. The ground is covered with it. Camp meeting wouldn't have the

LAWRENCE CAMP SHELVED BY LAW

Marion Allen, T. Hoyt Davis and Marshal Cox Among Those Affected.

By L. A. FARRELL.

President Roosevelt's approval of the Hatch bill, designed to bar "pernicious political activity" on the part of federal job holders left the Georgia political situation higher up in the air than ever but the action caused some deep if not anxious discussions.

For one thing the signing of the bill halted the activity of the President's most outspoken advocate, District Attorney Lawrence Camp, the recognized leader of the third term movement in Georgia.

The Hatch act also definitely removes Camp and a number of other prominent office holders, notably Internal Revenue Collector Marion H. Allen, District Attorney T. Hoyt Davis of Macon; Marshal Charles H. Cox, as potential delegate to the 1940 Democratic national convention. These men have been familiar at conventions as the keynote speakers for a number of years. The bill exempts cabinet members and policy making officials from its provisions but none of the Georgia office holders who heretofore

Atlanta Girl Figures in Romances On 'Human Bomb's' Primrose Path

Atlanta held a peculiar fascination for John Thornburg, 26-year-old "Human Bomb," before his capture in Nevada and sentencing in Leavenworth, Kan., to 35 years' imprisonment for his spectacular hold-up March 27 of the First National Bank of Chanute, Kan.

It was revealed yesterday that he made this city frequently a fleeting headquarters during the hectic months of dashing about, buying automobiles and a cabin cruiser—and forming attachments for underworld sirens.

While FBI agents here were silent yesterday, news dispatches from Leavenworth related Thornburg's detailed confession of activities.

At least one young Atlanta woman, whose identity was closely withheld, was drawn to the dashing, plausible bandit, and accompanied him to Texas.

When funds from the robbery grew slim, he returned here, and immediately bought a ticket to Nevada, which proved the end of the line for his career of crime. Fate of the young woman could not be established last night.

Also in Atlanta, in the more flush period soon after the robbery, he purchased a sports coupe. This, too, has a new post of 200 dashings days. Safety Director Otto T. Roehl said today.

REBELLIOUS SOLONS KILL $119,000,000 FOR FARM LOANS

Presidential Signature on Act Raises Doubts Concerning 3d Term; Some View It as a Barrier.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—(AP)—The Hatch bill barring federal employees from political campaigns became law with President Roosevelt's signature today and immediately legislators fell into disagreement as to whether the bill would prove a bar to a third-term candidacy.

One school of thought, as typified by Senator King, Democrat, Utah, was that the measure would tend to obstruct any third-term drive by making it impossible for federal officials to be delegates to party conventions.

Another, as represented by Senator Murray, Democrat, Montana, contended that the act would have no bearing on a third term. Murray argued that such a movement depended little on the activity of federal officeholders.

F. D. R. Still Quiet.

While Senator Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire, interpreted the President's action in signing the measure as "the first definite indication that Mr. Roosevelt will not be a candidate for a third term," there was still no word from the White House as to the President's 1940 intentions.

However, some interest was created by a conference which Mr. Roosevelt held this afternoon with officers of the Good Neighbor League, Democratic party officials and others. The word was passed that the conference reviewed the status of the Good Neighbor League, which was formed in 1936 to battle for Roosevelt principles, and which was widely credited with helping swing a large part of the negro vote to the Roosevelt standard in the 1936 elections.

Revive League.

Those at the conference included Walter Jones, Pittsburgh financier and head of the league; Charles Michelson, publicity director of the Democratic national committee, and Lowell Mellett, head of the National Emergency Council, a White House-supervised agency. The conferees refused to say whether the league, inactive for some time, was about to be revived in preparation for the 1940 campaign.

In signing the Hatch bill, Mr. Roosevelt adopted the unusual procedure of sending a lengthy message to congress, in which he expressed approval of the measure's aims and, in fact, declared that it had its "Genesis" in a recommendation he made to congress in January asking penalties to prevent political manipulation in connection with relief.

In his message today, Mr. Roosevelt went on to warn that the measure should not be used as a "gag" to deprive federal officeholders and relief workers of their civil rights. For example, he said, it would be "un-American" if the act were used to prevent federal officials from answering unwarranted "political attacks," from Administration Will Send $800,000,000 Housing Measure to Apparently Certain Defeat Today.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—(AP)—The administration took another beating from the house economy bloc today, but nevertheless decided upon a "suicide plan" for bringing the much-opposed $800,000,000 housing bill to a vote tomorrow.

The measure would double the lending authority of the housing administration. It is a companion measure to the lending bill which was killed in the house yesterday. Administration leaders conceded in advance that it would be defeated.

But administration men indicated they wanted a vote to pin the responsibility for the bill's defeat on the rebellious coalition of Republicans and Democrats, particularly the latter.

Today the relentless economy block carried the congressional revolt to a new victory when it cut the appropriation bill 75 per cent, by rejecting a $119,000,000 appropriation for loans to sustain the prices of farm commodities.

Cotton Affected.

Then it passed a $54,191,000 deficiency appropriation bill, minus the loan fund, and sent it to the senate. It did so in the face of a warning by Secretary Wallace that unless the money were made available corn prices would go to 1932 levels, wheat quotations would fall sharply and the prices of cotton, dairy products, wool and rye would be "seriously" affected.

The vote rejecting the loan was by a narrow margin, 116 to 110. It was notable in that it beat not only the administration but also the usually invincible bipartisan farm bloc.

Some gallery observers credited the latter fact to the circumstances that city members who usually support administration measures voted with the economy group.

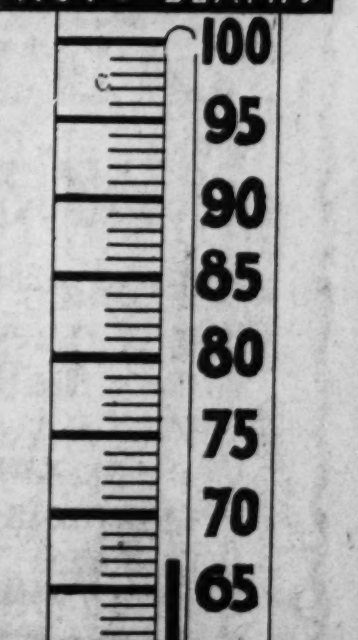

They did so, it was apparent, because they were disgruntled with farm members for failing to support them in obtaining increased relief appropriations, and for joining in yesterday's slaughter of the administration's lending program.

Aside from the action in the

PEACH DEVELOPED
Fruit Grown by University Department Is Nearly Grapefruit Size.
A new type of peach, nearly as large as a grapefruit and of excellent flavor, has been developed by the horticultural department of the University of Georgia from trees planted just six years ago. A basket of the new variety was presented yesterday to Chancellor S. V. Sanford and in turn was sent to Governor and Mrs. Rivers, both of whom gave unqualified approval to the latest addition to Georgia's fruit family. First shipments from the 750-acre orchard were made last year and won instant favor in eastern markets. The profit from a six-carload crop was estimated at $100 an acre. Severe frosts in the early spring followed by a lengthy drought during the growing season resulted in a reduced yield for this year's crop but four carloads have been shipped to the east and early returns indicate a profit per acre about the same as last year. Several requests for carload shipments were received from New York, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and other important market centers. The department of horticulture is headed by Dr. H. T. McDaniels and Roy Holmes is in charge of the orchard.

PIN BALLS TO ROLL IN ATLANTA UNTIL HIGH COURT RULES

Judge Continues Injunction Pending Decision; Upholds City License in Farm Market Case.

Pin ball machine operation is still legal today in 166 Atlanta locations.

Pending a decision of the Georgia court of appeals on the legality of a city ordinance outlawing them, 25 operators complied with an order issued by Judge Walter C. Hendrix yesterday and posted $15 license bond for each machine while the case remains in court.

Judge Hendrix yesterday also sustained a demurrer to a suit filed by about 25 operators at the state farmers' market against an effort on the part of the city to collect a $100 annual city license.

Pending appeal in this case, Hendrix provided that operators may post $25 each with the clerk of the superior court, and that they could continue to conduct their businesses during the life of the supersedeas.

Pin ball operators paid $2,490 into the clerk's office, representing $15 for each of the 166 machines to be kept in operation. The figure is equivalent to one quarter's license fee under the old city ordinance.

When the ordinance barring pin ball operations was passed, operators appealed to the courts and obtained a temporary injunction. On trial, Judge Hendrix sustained the city in its contentions, but allowed an appeal and provided that the injunction would be kept in force in the event the $15 was posted for each machine.

The legal firm of Talmadge, Fraser and Camp represented the pin ball operators and Savage, Winn, Murphy and Sterne represented the municipality.

Noon yesterday was the deadline for filing the money for continued operation and several hundred operators surrendered their machines rather than continue the long fight.

AYCOCK IS GRANTED RESPITE OF 30 DAYS

Savannah Slayer Is Resentenced To Die in Chair
August 18.

Through two agencies of government, William B. Aycock, of Savannah, was sentenced yesterday to die in the electric chair 16 days hence for the murder of Mrs. Martha Sikes and, a few hours later, was assured a 30-day respite.

Superior Judge John Rourke Jr. passed the sentence in Savannah, asserting "if our executive or pardoning authorities or courts are going to indiscriminately set aside verdicts of juries," the death penalty might well be abolished.

Downing Musgrove, executive secretary to Governor Rivers, announced late in the day a 30-day respite would be granted, dated as of yesterday, to permit defense attorneys to appeal to the State Pardon and Parole Commission for commutation of the sentence to life imprisonment.

Aycock's conviction of killing Mrs. Sikes, 14 months ago, was upheld by the Georgia supreme court.

Judge Rourke said he received from the State Pardon and Parole Commission notice Aycock had petitioned for the commutation.

He said he was aware of the law giving a judge power to change a death sentence to life imprisonment on a conviction based on circumstantial evidence, but had declined to change the sentence in the Aycock case.

Musgrove reported the date for a hearing before the commission and Governor Rivers had not been set.

"The formal application," he said, "is being prepared by Shelby Myrick, Savannah attorney."

SON FREED IN KILLING DAD TO SAVE MOTHER

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—(P)—James McHugh, 24, who killed his father to save his mother from a brutal beating, was freed of a manslaughter charge today in felony court.

A coroner's jury yesterday decided the death was "justifiable homicide."

Frank McHugh, 46, was killed during a fist fight in the McHugh home early yesterday when he ignored James' plea to stop beating his mother, Anna, 46.

Veteran City Teachers Ask PensionsGEORGIA NURSES TO ATTEND SCHOOL

3 From St. Joseph's To Take Social Action Course in Washington.

Three St. Joseph's student nurses will attend the summer school of Catholic Action to be held August 14-19 at the Mayflower hotel in Washington. They are Marie Baumgartner, 813 Sherwood road, Atlanta; Janet Curran, of Rome, and Josephine Johnson, of Cusseta.

The school, to be attended by students from the eastern and southern states, has chosen the theme "Social Action" for the session, in answer to the late Pope Pius XI's appeal to Catholic educators for "special attention to the sciences of civics, sociology, and economics, with a view of evolving a constructive program of social action fitted in detail to local needs."

Five regular and 25 elective courses will be offered by the faculty, including Christian democracy, consumers' co-operatives, vocational guidance, and political science.

Sutton Praises Service of Applicants; Board May Send Approval to Council on Monday.

Nine veteran Atlanta school teachers yesterday filed applications for retirement, effective September 1, and City Comptroller B. Graham West, secretary of the general employees' pension board, said a meeting will be held in time to present the applications to city council for approval Monday.

Among the group are principals whose total service is 112 years, and a negro principal, who entered the system 56 years ago.

Those retiring are: Miss Lillian R. Flynn, 156 Seventh street, N. E., principal at the Stanton school. She entered the system in 1891, and has taught at Davis Street, Boulevard, Lee Street, Grant Park and Ashby Street schools.

Mrs. Evan L. Thornton, College Park, principal of the J. C. Harris school. She entered the system in 1904 and taught at the Peoples Street school before going to Harris school.

Mrs. Bessie Harvey Pew, 1020 Columbia avenue, N. E., principal of the Goldsmith school, who taught previously at Formwalt, Tenth Street, Boys' Special and Ivy Street schools. She entered the service in 1893, but was out from 1897 until 1914.

Miss Mildred DuPont Thompson, 1041 West Peachtree, member of the Commercial High school faculty, who entered the system in 1912.

Miss Margaret Mary Doonan, 886 Myrtle street, teacher at Crew Street school, who taught at Inman Park and Luckie Street schools after entering the system in 1914.

Mrs. Mamie Fife Overby, Kings Highway, teacher at Girls' High school. She entered the system in 1903 and taught at State Street, Davis Street, Boulevard-Davis, Fraser Street and Battle Hill schools.

Miss Nell Gatins, 936 Piedmont avenue, teacher at Hoke Smith Junior High school, who entered the system in 1893 and taught at Williams Street, Davis Street, Bell Street, Walker Street and Inman Park schools.

Miss Mary A. Graves, 67 Peachtree place, N. W., teacher at Williams Street school. She entered the service in 1905 and taught at Calhoun, Crew Street, Georgia Avenue, Edgewood, Greenwood Avenue, S. M. Inman and Kirkwood schools.

Ella T. Landrum, negro, principal of Wesley school, who entered the service in 1883, was out from 1886 until 1917 and who taught at Mitchell Street, Yonge Street, Yonge Night school, Roach, Krogman and Dimmock schools.

Willis A. Sutton, school superintendent, praised the services of all those who are applying for pensions. He said he will attempt to make shifts so as not to add to the personnel because of the retirements.

SAFETY DIRECTOR IN ATLANTA TODAY

Miss Telford To Plan With Local Leaders for Fall Campaign.

Miss Marion Telford, of Chicago, educational director of the National Safety Council, will arrive here today for a two-day visit during which she will confer with Captain Jack Malcom and other safety leaders on plans for a safety campaign this fall.

While here she will be the guest of Miss Mina Gleissen, principal of the Bass Junior High school. A luncheon will be given in her honor at noon tomorrow at the Piedmont hotel.

LEAGUE OF VOTERS WILL HEAR HUBBARD

C. S. Hubbard, director of textbooks and library service in the State Department of Education, will address the DeKalb League of Women Voters at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the courthouse at Decatur.

The program also will include reports of committees. Mrs. Wellington Stevenson, president, announced there would be no meeting of the executive board in August and requested the membership committee to make a full report. Hostesses will be Mesdames W. A. Ozmer, W. G. Bryant, George W. Woods, O. P. Bray, W. P. Smith, T. W. Ayres, P. B. Dick, Frank B. Pond, Z. W. Jones, James A. Allison, J. C. Johnson, G. G. Hoch, C. R. McQuown and Miss Florence Smith.

For the past five years in the upholstery department of Sterchi Bros., never have I seen as many beautiful fabrics as are now on display. Hundreds of the season's latest patterns have just been received. You should see them; they are quite inexpensive. Call Main 3100, upholstery department, and we will call at your home the same day and give you an estimate and show you the new materials without charge. In going through the South's Largest Department Store of Home Furnishings, I was amazed at the new arrivals in complete suites and odd pieces that are priced so low at Sterchi Bros. (Signed) R. B. ACCUSED ATTORNEY DEFENDS POSITION

Disbarment Move Due to Misunderstanding, Says Burton.

Louis A. Burton, an attorney, who was named in disbarment proceedings instituted Tuesday by the grievance committee of the Bar Association over the divorce case of Mrs. Lillie Mae Goss, issued the following statement yesterday in reply to the action:

"In this case the actual costs would have been $14, the defendant being a non-resident of this state and every lawyer knows that service on non-residents must be perfected by publication.

The cost of publication on a divorce suit is $8. The advance cost of filing a divorce suit is $6, a total of $14 before the proceedings could have been begun. I was paid $10. I drew the papers and took up some time with this complainant. She was to pay an additional $10 before I filed the suit which she could not do on the date agreed on because I was in the hospital.

"I am ready to file this suit when the actual court cost is paid. This whole thing is the result of a misunderstanding which will be cleared up at the hearing.

A. L. Henson, attorney and prominent American Legionnaire, yesterday said he will pay over $30 due clients as "soon as I find out who to pay it to."

Henson Tuesday was cited to show cause why he should not place the $30 in a savings bank for three minor children of a client as previously ordered by the grievance committee of the Atlanta Bar Association.

"I am trying to find out whom to pay," Henson said last night. "There are adverse claimants. The mother claims the money and so does the grandmother. The money is now in the bank in a trust fund and will be paid out as soon as the courts decide who is the rightful owner."

"The grievance committee makes no charges against me, but merely asks that the money be placed in a savings account to the credit of certain parties. If there were no adverse claimants, this would have been done long ago, and as soon as the court decides who ought to have the money, it will be paid."

INSURANCE AGENT, 20, SLAIN BY SISTER, 15

BIG STONE GAP, Va., Aug. 2. (UP)—Lacy Hammett Jr., 20-year-old insurance agent and member of a prominent southwest Virginia family, was shot five times late today by his pretty 15-year-old sister, Aileen, Deputy Sheriff P. H. Kennedy reported.

Kennedy said the girl shot her brother five times through the body after a family quarrel. The youth died before help could reach his home where his sister had been visiting him, Kennedy reported.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking away acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 2 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste. Frequent or steady passage with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, and other troubles. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

BRIDGES TESTIFIES THAT REDS GAVE AID TO HIS UNION

CIO Leader Believes Em- ployer Class Could Not Be Eliminated 'Except by Poison of Something'

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2.—(AP) Harry Bridges, fighting deportation to his native Australia, testified today he believed the employer class could not be eliminated "except by poison of something," admitted his longshore union had received Communist aid and said he once jokingly said he was a member of that party.

He said the longshoremen had received aid from the Communist party during the 1934 waterfront strike here, and he knew union men who were Communists, although he reiterated his denial he was a member of the party or ever had paid dues, as a government witness had testified.

To support its charge that the west coast CIO leader is a deportable alien the government is trying to prove that he is a member of the Communist party and that the party advocates the violent overthrow of the government.

The "poison" remark came with a grin after Bridges had testified he did not think employers could be eliminated "by the ballot or any other means." Thomas B. Shoemaker, chief government counsel at the trial on Angel Island, followed up with the question, "Do you believe they should be eliminated?"

Bridges replied he thought the question "rather ridiculous—so long as we have a democratic form of government."

"I have no love for the employers," Bridges said, "but a move to destroy them would destroy the democratic form of government, so I don't see how anyone could bring about elimination of employers."

Bridges previously testified he had said jokingly he was a member of the Communist party, but added he did not believe the party was subversive.

"Do you believe in our form of government?" Shoemaker asked. "I most certainly do." Then he was asked to define his idea of democracy.

"Briefly stated, I would say it is ruled by the majority in the interests of the majority."

POWER OF POLICE LAUDED BY ARNALL

Attorney General Cites Qual- ifications Necessary To Enforce Laws.

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 2.—(AP)—Georgia police chiefs were told today "the movies have glorified the American gangsters—we need to glorify the American policemen."

Addressing the annual convention of the Georgia Police Chiefs' Association, Attorney General Ellis Arnall continued:

"Without the power of the police forces, our society would be confused and many of our people would not respect the rights of others."

He said in exchange for the salary paid a policeman the public demanded enough physical strength and courage to enforce the law, unquestionable honesty, "and that he be intelligent and able to discreetly discharge his duties."

Most of all, Arnall observed, the public expects a policeman to be patient, considerate and kind.

Governor Rivers was praised for "making progress in eliminating abuse of pardons and paroles."

Solicitor General Henry H. West, of the western circuit, lauded the chief executive, but said "Georgia still has a long way to go" in parole work and recommended a merit system of granting convict pardons.

HEAVY FINES METED ON LOTTERY CHARGES

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
ROME, Ga., Aug. 2.—Three defendants were given heavy fines here late this afternoon in Floyd superior court by Judge John C. Mitchell, of Cherokee circuit, who was presiding here while Judge Claude H. Porter was presiding over Judge Mitchell's court.

Two men, listed on court records as Dan Sneed and Sam Cohen, were convicted on charges of operating slot machines and were fined $1,000 and costs each, or 12 months in prison. A defendant listed as Charles Williams, alias Buck Williams, charged with violating the prohibition law, was fined $400 and costs. All three filed motions for new trials.

MASONS WILL MEET.

SOCIAL CIRCLE, Ga., Aug. 2.—The Eighth Masonic District convention will be held here Thursday, August 10, at the Dawson Lodge No. 68, P. & A. M., as host group. The district is made up of 39 lodges from 19 counties.

Old Dobbin Disputes Rights With Auto

AMERICUS, Ga., Aug. 2.—(AP) The year's still 1939, not 1909, but down here in Sumter county a horse ran over an automobile. Lamar C. Chapman, Montezuma motorist, said the horse ran out of a driveway and smack into the side of his car, causing about $25 damage to the machine and unestimated damage to the horse.

Chapman said he and the owner of the horse arranged a friendly settlement.

ATLANTA GIRL ONE OF 'BOMB'S' FLAMES

A little later, he wrecked, and traded on another for $700, considerably less than its cost to him.

Boasts of Crimes.

It was Thornburg's boast, after he had heard Federal District Judge Richard J. Hopkins impose the lengthy sentence, that, if all his offenses were given judicial cognizance, he would receive a life sentence.

Federal Agent Z. J. Vanlandingham was declared by the dispatches to have induced Thornburg "to talk."

After the robbery, the prisoner told the officer, he fled to Fayetteville, Ark., moved on to Little Rock and then proceeded to Birmingham, where he met a girl. They went to a hotel and registered, the agent said. Thornburg told him, as "Mr. and Mrs. Dean Purell."

Robbed by Sweetie.

Undismayed by a certain desperate attitude—which led him to strap dynamite on his person and hold the percussion caps in his hands while extorting the Chant bank's money by threats—the Birmingham acquaintance calmly waited until Thornburg went to sleep, and then robbed him of $400.

Awakening and finding she had vanished, Thornburg came to Atlanta, bought the flashy coupe and hurried on to the Florida east coast. There he acquired the cabin cruiser.

Always one for action, the "Bomb" soon accomplished the wrecking of the coupe, and procured its successor. Tiring of the boat, on which he staged more than one short-lived romance, he sold it, and moved on. In the second automobile he toured the south extensively, with a variety of girl friends, even hurtling down to Old Mexico, famed for its piquant cuisine and senoritas.

World's Fair Jaunt.

The taste of tamales palled—and he took it on north to New York and the World's Fair. On this expedition he was accompanied by a man and woman, for whom he paid the entire expense of the jaunt.

They, too, vanished in their turn, and Thornburg started south again in the automobile. At Sanford, N. C., he sold the machine, and flew to Atlanta by airplane.

It was on this occasion that he met the Atlanta girl whom he took to Texas.

"He got around a lot," sleuths here ruminated last night. "He didn't do so badly, in a way, at that. The whole odyssey," said

POP BOTTLE HURLED IN ARKANSAS HOUSE

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 2.—(AP)—The dignity of the Arkansas house of representatives was ruffled today when one member threw a pop bottle at a colleague who called him "a big fat-head."

The veteran Dan W. Johnston hurled the bottle across the chamber at B. Frank Williams, who, addressing the house on a point of personal privilege, referred to Johnston as "a big fat-head from Johnson county who has been pouring it on me for two days."

The bottle grazed Williams' shoulder and crashed into the press section, narrowly missing three newspapermen.

Don't Let Summer Sun Kill Your Hair

Your hair-growing structure is delicate and reacts unfavorably to over exposure of hot rays of the mid-day summer sun. Such exposure may increase your hair fall, aggravate dandruff and start you more definitely on the road to baldness.

Call at a Thomas office today for free advice on the care of your hair during the summer months. A Thomas expert will gladly tell you how to enjoy summer sports without injury to your hair. He will tell you when and how to expose your hair to the sun; when to wear a hat; what to do about excessive perspiration on the scalp—about salt water bathing and shower baths. He will also explain exactly how Thomas effectively ends dandruff, stops falling hair and regrows hair on the thin and bald spots. No charge is made for consultation nor for scalp examination. You are always welcome.

Gate City Chosen Over Chicago, New Orleans, Cleveland—Support of Dixie Chapters Helps

Three years work on the part of Atlanta Red Cross officials was rewarded yesterday when Chairman Norman H. Davis announced in Washington that the 1940 National Red Cross convention would be held in Atlanta May 12-16.

Atlanta will be the first southern city in which the national Red Cross convention ever has met. Approximately 5,000 persons annually attend the conclave.

Dr. Frank K. Boland, chairman of the Atlanta Chapter of the Red Cross, received the following telegram from Davis:

"I am pleased to advise you that decision has been reached to hold the 1940 Red Cross convention in Atlanta for May 12 to 16. Have been much impressed with the endorsement of the Atlanta invitation by all southern chapters. We are looking forward to an unusually fine convention."

Honor to Atlanta.
Dr. Boland said it was a distinct honor to Atlanta to be selected as the convention city, especially when it was considered the city was picked over Cleveland, Chicago and New Orleans, all three of which were trying to get the convention. On odd years the convention meets in Washington and on even years it meets in some other city.

Mrs. George D. Goodman, of the Atlanta chapter, first presented the city's invitation to the national convention in San Francisco in 1938 after a year's work spent gathering endorsements for Atlanta.

Last spring a large delegation from Atlanta, armed with letters from leading citizens and from neighboring chapters of the Red Cross, attended the convention in Washington and again presented the invitation.

"I think it a wise move on the part of the national officers to bring the 1940 convention to Atlanta," Alvin E. Cates, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, said. "The people of the south will be brought closer to the great work being done by the organization and will have a better understanding of what it is accomplishing."

Faber Bollinger, of the Atlanta Convention and Visitors' Bureau, which has been working with the Red Cross officials to get the national meeting for Atlanta, greeted the announcement with:

Second Big Meeting.
"It shows Atlanta is more and more being recognized as a national convention city. The Red Cross is the second national association in the past two weeks to select Atlanta for next year's convention. The other was the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers."

"Since the Red Cross has never met in the south before, great good should result from the meeting for it will help public understand what the Red Cross really means. The greatest good will not be from a financial return to the city of Atlanta, but from the opportunity presented for the Red Cross to learn how it can help the south in its various economic problems."

Convention headquarters will be established in the Biltmore hotel.

It's Carnival Time in West End—Here Is Preview

The festival spirit will prevail when residents of West End celebrate civic improvements at a street carnival tonight, under sponsorship of the West End Businessmen's Association. Left to right (lower) are Louise King, Marie Crawford, Myrtle Richards, Geraldine Boggs and Billie Townsend. At the top is Betty Scott.

Trains of motor trucks hauling ten trailers are used on Italy's new express roads.

Old-Fashioned Street Carnival Will Open in West End Tonight

Thousands of Residents of Section and Friends Will Assemble on Gordon Street for Gala, Colorful Celebration of Recent Civic Improvements.

It's carnival time in West End! At 8 o'clock tonight, thousands of residents of the section—and their friends from other parts of town—will assemble on Gordon street, between Lee and Ashby streets, to enjoy an old-fashioned street carnival.

The affair will be held under auspices of the West End Business Men's Association, and will celebrate the widening of Gordon street, improved transportation facilities and other civic improvements.

Gala Affair Planned.
A gay and gala affair is planned, George Wilson, president of the association, said last night. "The association invites everyone in West End to come and have a good time. There'll be free lemonade, balloons, souvenirs, cakes and other refreshments."

"There'll be plenty of good music. The Georgia Girls' Military band, the Boy Scout Drum and Bugle corps, and an Hawaiian band will be on hand to keep things going in holiday mood."

Program Stated:
"In addition, there'll be an entertaining program of feats of magic, and vaudeville skits."

"The idea is—come one, come all."

Besides the widening of Gordon street, the festive event will mark

GAMING SHIP DEFIES FLOTILLA OF POLICE

Rex Still King as Siege Is Laid—Out of Range of Tony's Water Hose.

SANTA MONICA, CAL., Aug. 2.—(AP)—Anthony Corneo Stralla, a San Francisco waterfront lad who made good on the high seas—is still in command of his pride and joy, the Rex, "Flagship" of the Southern California's gambling fleet.

He refused writ-laden officers permission to board his neon-trimmed ship last night and was still holding out late tonight.

Three other gambling boats "surrendered" last night to state, county and municipal authorities, under the direction of State Attorney General Earl Warren, who went to serve warrants charging violations of the state's anti-gambling code.

Not so Tony. He told the officers he was fully within his legal rights. Then he squirted water on them.

Stralla, better known since the bootleg whisky era as plain Tony Corneo, laugh at officers uncomfortably bobbing about his colorful Rex in tiny "guard" boats.

Attorney General Earl Warren holds felony warrants charging Corneo with conspiracy and bookmaking. "The Rex is still in a state of siege and will continue to be until Corneo has surrendered and the nuisance is abated," Warren stated.

Corneo and most of his 200 employees remained aboard the Rex, hemmed in by a flotilla of small boats carrying attorney general's aides, district attorney investigators and sheriff's deputies. Officers remained just out of squirting range.

Patrons had been evacuated.

BUILDING IN ALBANY.
ALBANY, Ga., Aug. 2.—July building permits in Albany totaled $34,255, one of the lightest months of the year to date, D. W. Broanan, building inspector, stated yesterday. Added to the $328,111 total for the first six months, the July figure brought the total to date to $363,366. Practically all of the new construction in July was new homes, of which more than 1,000 have been constructed since January 1, 1934.

ENOUGH SUNSHINE TO HAMPER WEEVIL

Good Growth, With Bolls Opening Rapidly in South Georgia, Reported.

In spite of frequent showers, enough sunshine spread over Georgia farmlands the past week to keep the cotton boll weevil fairly well in check, the weather bureau reported yesterday.

"Good growth has been general with bolls developing well and opening rapidly in some southern counties," the report said. "Apparently very little shedding has taken place. Picking will begin this week in southern counties."

An abundance of rainfall was reported southward beyond Americus and Macon, but it diminished rapidly in the southern part of the state. A few places from Eastman southward had none.

The report said corn was nearly ready for harvest in southern counties. Some complaints of a poor yield of peanuts from about Albany southward were received.

Put Finishing Touches on Salem Camp Ground 'Tent'

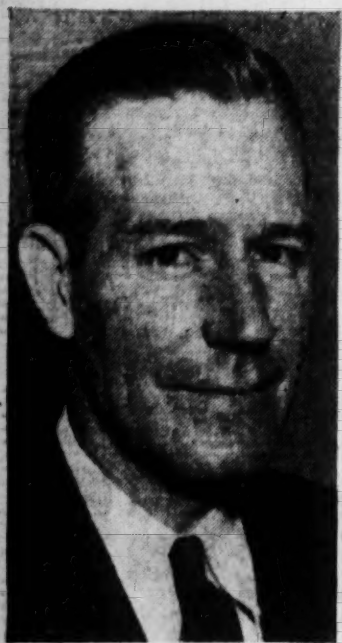

Workmen were busy yesterday at Salem Camp Ground. They were getting ready for the 10-day season of camp meeting which opens today. Here they are putting finishing touches on the cottage or "tent" of Mrs. E. T. Hicks, of Conyers. The meeting this year will be interdenominational and hundreds of other religious faiths are expected to attend.

rear of the courthouse from which county machines heretofore have obtained fuel, but which will be abandoned under the new plan. Moody offered to pay one cent a gallon for gasoline sold to the county, a recognized private commercial rate, it was explained.

"I suppose I am supposed to answer that," Almand replied. "We did not hold any meeting yesterday. We just explained the plan to the police. There was no effort to slight you."

"I was not present at the meeting although I would have been if I had known about it," Adams countered.

"I want to say first that there was no meeting of the commission," Almand reiterated. "Why were not there I don't know. We meet in the mornings chiefly because you will not take time off the meet in the afternoons. I can't help it that you did not hear Mr. Ragsdale's (J. A. Ragsdale, commissioner, and author of the new automobile operation plan) announcement that he proposed to explain the matter to the police department. There was no meeting of the commission yesterday."

Adams: "It seems to me that the entire program was started in the police department where it is most impracticable. I think it will reduce the efficiency and effectiveness of the police department."

Ragsdale: "I am sorry that you did not hear the announcement. We would have been glad to have you there."

Ragsdale then asked Commissioners Chastain and Glover Bailey if they did not hear him make the announcement. They said they had.

Adams then made a motion that in the future that all meetings of the commission be held in the courtroom on the fifth floor of the courthouse, but did not press it when he was told that one of the divisions of the superior court uses the room in the mornings.

"Board meetings are important, and I think they should be held right in this room," Adams said as the matter was dropped.

Wants Expert Advice.

Earlier in the day, Adams had suggested that the grand jury request executives in charge of large privately owned passenger fleets to map out a plan for operation of the county machines, which have been the subject of considerable criticism within the past few weeks.

He pointed out that these men are familiar with such problems and that they would eliminate a hit or miss program, which the commission has approved. Curtailment of county police efficiency by 30 per cent was predicted by Adams if the present plan is made applicable to the police department.

CHAIRMAN ATTACKS LABOR BOARD RULING

Says CIO Favored 'Unfairly' in Decision Made Against AFL.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—(UP)—A new National Relations Board majority today denied bargaining rights to three AFL craft unions in a decision which the board's dissenting chairman said favored CIO industrial unionism "unfairly."

William M. Leiserson, new member of the board, teamed with Edwin S. Smith for the first time in deciding the American Can Company case at Brooklyn, N. Y., but could not agree in their reasons for reaching the same conclusion.

The majority ruling dismissed representation petitions filed by the operating engineers, the firemen and oilers, and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL unions, which sought to split their craft off from the industrial unit now under contract with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee (CIO).

Chairman J. Warren Madden's dissent was sharp. He asserted that the majority's decision "for all practical purposes" denied the craft form of organization the right to exist in the company's plants and enunciated a principle which "will result in a wide diversity of bargaining units within a particular type of industry."

shades of trees. Everything was running at a feverish pitch. The women rushed about inside the tents, their feet swishing in the foot-deep straw. Food had to be prepared. The furniture had to be arranged. Things must be in order when the first meeting gets under way tomorrow night. Others will join the early arrivals tomorrow. This year the camp meeting is interdenominational. Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and those of other religious faiths will mingle as they go in quest of the old-time religion.

There probably is no more picturesque place in Georgia than Salem Camp Ground. The low-roofed arbor is situated in the center of a green-turfed area flanked by shrubbery and trees. And surrounding it, like a wall, are the cottages or tents.

A number of improvements have been made since last year. Freshly painted, white cottages dot the landscape. There are several new ones and some of the old ones have been torn down. Tennis courts are under construction. A new recreation field has been laid out.

Major R. J. Guinn and H. Y. McCord, both of Atlanta, take an active interest in the camp ground and many of the improvements have been brought about by their efforts.

As he strolled across the grounds yesterday, directing the last-minute preparations for the meeting, Major Guinn predicted the crowd this year would be greater than ever before. Throngs, he said, are planning to come to the night meetings from Atlanta and surrounding towns.

The Manns, of Conyers, and the Ramseys, of Covington, already are here. They never miss a camp meeting. Mrs. C. D. Ramsey, now 66, has been coming to Salem ever since she can remember. And she has missed few of these annual sessions. They have their own cottages and remain throughout the 10 days.

One of the most historic buildings on the ground is "Kitty's Cottage," a slave house that was moved from Oxford by Mr. McCord.

Kitty was a slave girl belonging to Bishop James O. Andrew. She was offered her freedom—a chance to go back to Liberia—but she preferred to stay with her master. The slavery issue caused a rift among Methodists which was not mended until last year when the three branches were united. The story is told in a manuscript prepared by Mr. McCord and exhibited in the cottage.

"Kitty's Cottage" was built around 1842. The hundreds of visitors to the camp grounds during the next 10 days will have an opportunity to inspect it. It has a large open fireplace and a spinning wheel in one corner—both characteristic of the old days.

Today the rough seats beneath the arbor were empty. All activity was in the tents. But tomorrow night they will be filled by men and women and children who like the old-fashioned method of worship. They will lift their voices in unison on some of the old hymns that stirred the souls of their forefathers. Then they will listen to the preaching and sprinkle in a few "A-mens" when the minister touches their hearts.

Twin Achievements

The present session of congress, if it achieves nothing more, will go into history for two actions, both of which are of vital importance to the future of the country. One of these twin achievements was negative, the other positive.

On the positive side is credited the enactment of the Hatch bill, now signed by the President, which debar all federal employees, save only the president, vice president and members of congress and policy forming executives, from active part in politics. Under this new law no one receiving a federal wage or salary may participate actively in either elections or primaries.

The importance of this measure is that it removes from political influence the officeholder who, all too often, is swayed entirely by his desire to retain a well-paying job. In the past national party conventions have not infrequently been entirely controlled by such officeholders and the distribution of jobs has often had a deciding influence on nominations for the highest offices in the land.

The negative action was the defeat of the splendid bill. This proposed measure was, in actual fact, nothing but a glorified federal pork barrel. It provided, in its original form, for loans totaling nearly $3,000,000,000, to be advanced to states, counties, cities and other local government units, for the construction of allegedly self-liquidating projects. If they had, in practice, proved non-self-liquidating the taxpayers, of course, would have had to pay the bill.

The two achievements are of equal importance and are closely linked in their ultimate effect. The Hatch bill should go far to purify the national political scene, while the defeat of the splendid program removes one looming temptation of the moment from those who might believe the distribution of projects could bear heavily upon community sympathy for or against a party or candidate.

In addition to this, defeat of the splendid proposal is an encouraging sign that the era of unbridled federal spending is nearing its close. The sentiment for economy displayed in the halls of congress is but an echo of the rising tide for national thrift among the people as a whole.

Too long has private enterprise been crippled by over-heavy taxes. Yet those taxes cannot be lowered, appreciably, until the budget is balanced and a beginning, at least, is made on reduction of the national debt. If prosperity according to the American plan, which is by private enterprise, initiative and investment, is to return, industry and business and all the people must be given some relief from the taxation load.

With job-holding and project distribution—the pork barrel—removed from the national political picture and with a nation fast relearning the fundamental facts about economics and thrift, there is renewed hope today that the years of United States depression are coming to an early end. In any event, there are growing rays of light through the darkness, now.

Horses of Poland

"Get a horse!" was a cry of derision in the early days of the automobile. But that cry may become important, despite the progress of mechanized equipment, when and if a European war breaks out. That is, if the third annual horse show recently held at Lublin, about 100 miles from Warsaw, is any criterion. This Polish horse show stressed the major part which the horse still plays in that country.

Nearly 500 horses from all parts of Poland were entered in the show, a three-day exhibition which drew thousands of persons. In Poland the horse is still considered necessary for the defense of the country. General Maxime Weyand, former head of the French general staff, who reorganized the Polish army in 1920, is reported to have said the motor can never replace the horse in that country. Poland, conscious of the army need of the horse, is estimated to have more horses than any other European nation, with the exception of Russia.

Throughout their history the Poles have been devoted to horses and noted for them. They have developed a breed of their own, a saddle horse admirably suited to army requirements. The World War depleted the country of horse stock. Yet today they have developed this special breed and put themselves once more on the equine map. It may come in handy when map changing time rolls 'round again.

No Time for Name-Calling

It is sincerely to be hoped the difference of opinion regarding relief of the unemployable in Fulton county will not be permitted to approach the name-calling stage in over-zealous efforts to maintain given points of view.

It should not be forgotten for a moment that there is a paramount civic duty to be performed—administering to the needs of afflicted hungry men, women and children of the community. This duty has no relation whatever to one man's opinion or another man's views. The fact that a check or two may have gone to an undeserving person here and there or to an address which, on investigation, turned out to be a vacant lot or a hole in the ground, does not alter the fact that thousands of worthy people are faced with dire want, if not starvation, while the battle of words goes on.

Those who have charge of the relief work, who are unselfishly putting their shoulders to the wheel, without remuneration, have the confidence of the people. So do the county officials who are determined on getting a dollar's worth of good out of every dollar expended. But the people, whose confidence and financial assistance is necessary to make the relief program successful, are rapidly tiring of controversy.

The difference of opinion, therefore, promptly should be smoothed out. Sacrifices of viewpoint should be made on both sides. It is unthinkable that helpless people should be made to suffer both mentally and physically because of conflicting ideas as to how an agreed goal should be reached.

The Snow Cruiser

First the need. Then the invention. No better illustration of this axiom can be seen than in the brain child of Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, scientific director of the research foundation of the Armour Institute of Technology, Chicago. Dr. Poulter calls his invention a snow cruiser, an amazing vehicle designed to overcome many handicaps for the forthcoming Byrd expedition to Antarctica. Dr. Poulter served as second in command of the 1933 Byrd expedition and it was out of that experience the idea for the snow cruiser developed.

Dr. Poulter's cruiser will measure 55 feet from front to rear. It will serve as a mobile camp for, within its body, will be engine room, control room, machine shop, combination kitchen and photographic dark room, storeroom and living quarters. The cruiser will weigh 22 1-2 tons. Its two Diesel motors will drive two pairs of 10-foot wheels. Power can be applied separately to each of the four wheels, and both pairs of wheels can be turned, features, Dr. Poulter points out, which mean the cruiser can turn sharply around obstacles or move sideways, much like a crab. Another feature is that the cruiser's bow projects forward far enough to get over chasms 15 feet wide. This, says Dr. Poulter, will enable the vehicle to go over dangerous crevasses in the ice. The cruiser will carry on its roof a four-passenger plane, for exploratory flights. And the vehicle can carry fuel enough for 5,000 miles and provisions for a year.

On the forthcoming trip, Dr. Poulter's cruiser will function principally as accommodation for four scientists who will observe South Polar weather, geography and vegetation. Assuredly, the penguins will have something to stare at when the snow cruiser comes by!

As to what actually goes on in Outer Mongolia, the question is far from settled. All we get are the two sides.

THE TREATY WITH PANAMA.

(From the Louisville Courier-Journal.)

The new treaty with Panama, held up for three years by the senate foreign relations committee on the grounds that it would sacrifice vital American rights in the Isthmian republic, is ratified with little or no debate in the midst of the wrangling over the latest lending measure. The agreement, another concrete example of the Good Neighbor policy, belatedly is approved without any real opposition.

When the treaty was signed in the spring of 1936 a howl was raised that it raised the right of intervention in the Isthmian republic and provided a doubtful policy of joint responsibility for the protection of the Panama Canal. Also by agreeing to pay an annual rental of $250,000 in gold as provided by the original treaty instead of the same amount in devalued currency it set a dangerous precedent, according to its critics. Exchange of clarifying notes between the government at Washington and the government at Panama City cleared up these objections, but ratification was delayed until this week.

On the face of it the treaty restores sovereignty to the Isthmian republic, but it puts no restraint on protection of the strategic waterway in times of emergency. The United States will provide the protection of the Canal, but in co-operation with Panama; that is fully understood. Panama can do nothing that might endanger the Canal Zone because of the joint responsibility. The club of intervention is removed from purely domestic affairs as it was removed from Cuba. This manifestation of our declaration not to intervene in the affairs of Latin American countries followed closely the abrogation of the Platt amendment, and was a far-reaching move toward inter-American good will and co-operation.

The agreement to pay Panama in predevaluation dollars is an agreement in a category all its own. There was the original promise and that promise is lived up to after the Isthmian government repeatedly had refused to accept installments based on our present currency structure. If similar claims are made they must be met on their merits.

The treaty improves the friendly relations between the United States and the nations to the south, but it does not sacrifice any vital interests.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

CONGRESSIONAL DEADLOCKS WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—The presidential spending bill, the federal bill of the unhappy fate in congress once more dramatizes the deadlock in which the government is now squarely caught. The deadlock is likely to be prolonged and serious for several reasons—among others, dislike and distrust of the President on the hill, reciprocal feelings toward the hill at the White House, and a general planlessness afflicting the whole New Deal.

But the fundamental conflict is one of opinion, which must be understood if national politics are to be even remotely intelligible. Imagine an upper and a nether millstone interminably grinding the corn between, yet producing no good golden meal, and you have the general pattern.

NEW DEALERS ABOVE The New Dealers are the upper millstone. Such measures as the splendid bill result directly from their politico-economic convictions. They know the New Deal will be a political failure if times are bad at the next election. They quite honestly believe that government spending is the only road to prosperity. Consequently they are always driving to get the government money out.

The fate of the splendid bill, therefore, has made them fear the worst, both politically and economically. A few days ago their chief theorists, the economists of the Federal Reserve Board and Commerce, Agriculture and Labor departments met to discuss the business picture. For the present, with the Federal Reserve index running along at about 100, the meeting saw grounds for mild optimism. Indeed, it was agreed that business should improve until the index reaches 105 towards the new year. But everyone present was also positive that passage of the splendid bill in all its glory would be required to carry recovery through 1940.

It was pointed out, for example, that WPA employment will be shortly less, and that the PWA public works program, which is now going full blast, will simultaneously begin to taper off. The chances for another deflationary recession were gloomily canvassed, and the meeting broke up with the conclusion that if worst came to worst, "something" might be done at the next session.

COALITION BELOW The congressional conservatives, both Republican and Democratic, are the nether millstone. They turn the same lackluster eye on New Deal economics as the Wordsworthian hero on the primrose. The spending theory "just a theory is to them, and nothing more."

Their conviction, quite as strong as the contrary belief of the New Dealers, is that if business can only be let alone for a while it will get better of itself. Their receipt for prosperity's return is "No more Roosevelt." They discern the partly political motive in the splendid bill, and they fear that it will tend to perpetuate Roosevelt or his policies. Consequently, they oppose it with all the considerable stubbornness at their command.

They now have a clear majority of congress, and although they owe their official allegiance to both parties, they are acting together with increasing frequency and effect. The prospect of a third-term attempt has only tightened the bonds between the Republicans and Democrats among them. The form, in fact, of a coalition quite as unyielding as the left-wing junta of New Dealers.

AND THE MODERATES BETWEEN As for the luckless corn between the millstones, administration moderates like Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. are cast for this uncomfortable role. As everyone knows by now, this spending bill, with its self-liquidating features, was a moderate effort to stop the New Dealers' direct spending drive. The alternative was a large, costly and anything but self-liquidating program of public works. The moderates now desperately fear that the alternative at the next session will be a lavish program of old-age pensions—the "something" of the economists' meeting.

The situation can only be ended in two ways. The President, deserting the New Dealers' junta, can become a moderate himself, or the conservative coalition in congress can be broken by fear of the pension vote. Meanwhile, with one unlikely and one unhealthy way out, the probability is that the government will continue to grind and creak and rumble and still produce no meal until the next election rolls around.

Many a lad has manhood more
Than many a man full grown;
A real man keeps a-plugging along
For a cause most lost, alone.

Scout Training Builds Manhood.

Donn Fendler, 12 years old, was lost for eight days in the mountain wilderness of Maine. Without food save the berries he found, with clothes all torn from his body, scratched and sore and so weak he could barely crawl, he reached safety after an experience that the majority of men, let alone lads not yet in their teens, could not survive.

And, in explanation, he says he relied upon his training as a Boy Scout.

Incidentally, there was one item in Scout training that failed him in the pinch. When his matches were all wet he tried to start a fire, Indian fashion, by rubbing sticks together. Without result.

And we're ready to bet a couple of nickels, any time, that 99 per cent of all the Scouts and all the men in America would fail at that, too. We've read about the trick, but have always been awfully skeptical.

Young Donn saw a couple of bears, close on his terrific journey. But the bears were as scared as he and ran away, too. He was tortured by stinging flies and he had to drink from stagnant pools of water. Without result. He found his way back to the habitations of man by first following the course of a stream and then, when he saw a telephone line, by following that. Simple logical reasoning. But how many city bred men would have the same good sense? And the nights were, he said, awful cold. So he took an old blanket from an abandoned hut, he found, and worried afterwards for fear that was stealing.

It is a grand picture of a grand boy, the story depicts, isn't it?

The One Great Thing.

It is doubtful, though, if young Fendler realized, when he gave credit to his Scout training, just what is the most important thing that Scout men would have the same good sense? And the nights were, he said, awful cold. So he took an old blanket from an abandoned hut, he found, and worried afterwards for fear that was stealing.

To keep going, to never say die, to fight to the final gram of life within you, that is the essence of manhood. To push away despair, to disregard the parent hopelessness of the task, to keep plugging, plugging, trying. To keep on when weariness has numbed the brain and the mind wanders in semi-consciousness. To call on that last ounce of courage when the fight is, to all intents and purposes, lost.

That is the characteristic that lifts man above the beasts and that finds expression, more often than skeptics think, in the daily lives of average people.

There Is Manhood.

For there is, still, plenty of such manhood in the nation. The men who have struggled valiantly against debt, those who have grimly clung to the effort to provide food and clothes for wives and babies, when it seemed there were no jobs, no hope.

Those who have scorned to accept relief when they could, by any device, make an honest dollar for themselves.

And the testimony of young Donn Fendler proves that the supply of manhood will not pass with the going of any generation. For there are other boys like Fendler, lots of them. In and out of Scouting.

But, as Fendler says, the Scout training was the backbone of his courage. While Scouting teaches the qualities that go into the spirit of a boy such as this, Scouting is, truly, the hope of America, the answer to all the foes on things American.

What is the meaning of the word "Zionism"?

It is a "term coined in 1886 by Nathan Birnbaum (Matthias Achter) to describe the modern political attitude toward the resettlement and re-establishment of the Jews in Palestine. In 1896 the word attained vogue as describing the movement initiated by Theodor Herzl and supplanted all the terms previously used. FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Approved—NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—The federal government's intervention in the Kansas City and New Orleans corruption jobs may be approved only with reservations and regrets, because it must be observed that the thieves are snared by trick federal laws and that the state governments, which have the real duty of prosecuting them, don't. In Louisiana, it is true, the state has obtained some indictments, and it may be that there is a serious intention to go down the line with them, but that is hard to believe. The state government itself, through important members of its personnel, has been an accessory to their crimes, and there is reason to suspect that these actions against individuals who were powerful in state politics are intended only to beat the federalists to the punch. The state government is so corrupt that it cannot be trusted to do a thorough job. Evidence can disappear, witnesses can forget, go away or change their stories under threats of reprisal through taxes or even black-mail, and, of course, the Louisiana courts are no better than the machine of which they are a part, which is just awful.

That almost puts it up to the federal government, as receiver, to prosecute these people under any laws which can be stretched or twisted to cover their crimes. But that kind of doing doesn't increase the popular respect for law or for the federal government.

The income tax law was intended to serve a stated purpose, but it wasn't intended to punish men for grafting or embezzlement. There are state laws for that purpose, but in Missouri the state government passed up its responsibility, and the federalists went in blind, and Tom Pendergast failed to schedule money which he had stolen. In a fine sense he actually was punished for violation of the income tax laws, but everybody knows that he, like Al Capone, was guilty of worse crimes which were the state's own business, and that the state of Missouri, like the state of Illinois, was content to let the Department of Justice do a task which was properly local. The offenses against federal law were relatively minor.

In Louisiana, technically, certain defendants may have been guilty of using the mails to defraud, but the fraud itself, rather than the incidental use of the mails in one small detail of the transaction, was the important offense. The public isn't allowed to know much about the proceedings in the federal investigation in Louisiana just now, and it must be hoped that those federal authorities who are themselves members of a political group with interests at stake, have noble motives for the imposition of a censorship. Tom Stokes writes vaguely from Louisiana about the government's success in rounding up political ringsters and of stories of abject confessions, pouring from witnesses, but although I have been reading all the copy out of there, I don't know what he is talking about. It sounds like those stories from Russia, and perhaps Americans will have to smuggle in English or Canadian papers, published outside the jurisdiction of the American federal courts, to learn what goes on in Louisiana.

Morally If the states—and this makes three of them—Bankrupt to now, Missouri, Illinois and Louisiana—are too corrupt or flabby to apply their own laws to crime in their local affairs, that not only means that they are going to lose back their charters and lean their gross, helpless weight on the federal government, but that they are willing to stand for anything up to and including murder for long periods until the government can rig up a technical case of illegal parking by a federal letter box to catch a man who has been violating every law on the books. It means that they are morally bankrupt and want to become wards of a federal government, after all, has its weak and human moments itself.

There are some who strongly believe that the states are too expensive and that they have ducked their responsibilities in so many places that they ought to be abolished and replaced by fewer, bigger and better units. That is a proposition to be argued, but if it is to be done at all it should be done in a forthright way as a considered and deliberate step, not by declining to such a condition of helplessness and corruption that they have to call in the national government as cop, guardian and scavenger.

In Chicago, Kansas City and Louisiana there was not a single offense that was not covered by a state law. But Capone and Pendergast weren't even charged with littering the sidewalk in the state courts, and in Louisiana the state authorities didn't twitch a finger until newspaper exposes forced the federalists to move in.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

AS TO DOPE ADDICTS There probably is no real reason why the defeat of the President's lending bill and subsequent slashings by the economy bloc in congress should remind me of my very first day and experience as a reporter. Nevertheless, they do.

Sent out on police, I was taken by the regular reporter back into the cell block of the city jail. The bedding accommodations were long planks. On one of them lay a young man who was very, very sick. His shirt was gone and one could see his stomach heaving up and down. He was not pleasant to see.

"They always get that way when they take them off dope," said the experienced and wise police reporter.

It occurs to me that America, deprived of the normal dosage of the narcotic of spending, will be very, very sick. The country has been on it for six years and to be deprived of it will make the country rather sick. In this connection, I recall also the wise and veteran police reporter assured me that taking the addicts off dope, which is called "the cold water cure," never yet killed one.

BALANCING THE BUDGET It also becomes apparent that many of the New Dealers, even those in high places, are a little bit tired of it all. They have turned away from spending. Or at least they do not approve of the present methods of spending.

It now is believed by many of the leading economists of the New Deal that unemployment is to be with us for a long, long time. They do not believe it can be cured by work relief. They do not believe industry can absorb them all. They believe that if industry did absorb them, then industry would produce more than possibly could be consumed.

Therefore, there is growing in strength a group which believes the budget should be balanced and appropriations included for a dole—rather than for work relief. This was one of the two plans originally considered and rejected in favor of the work relief plan. England used the dole system. The results have been no better than our own insofar as the effect on the unemployed's morale and living standards. The results insofar as the English budget is concerned have been much better.

At any rate, many of the New Dealers are joining the ranks of those who are opposed to the present operation of government spending. They want the budget balanced, even if it hurts; a dole substituted for those who can't work and some sort of subsidy of industries such as, for instance, a great merchant marine and tremendous commercial airplane production and operation, to take up some of the unemployment slack.

The times ahead, with the patient sick from being taken off dope; with a campaign on for another president and both parties without a candidate, are sure to be clamorous, bitter, interesting and exciting. This change of attitude is adding its not-so-small impetus to the revolt in congress.

Here in Georgia we can recall our recent state legislative experience. The antics and actions of the legislature reflected the attitudes of the general public. One may be assured the revolt in congress as accurately reflects the expressions of people they represent.

It is to be found in odd places. Yesterday an elderly man in old and somewhat ragged clothes came into my office selling kitchen knives he had made by hand. He was a metal worker and had been out of a job for years. He claimed to have done about as well with his knives as with his old job. Without any invitation he launched into a discussion of the nation, denouncing Roosevelt for wasting money. Used to hearing it from many businessmen, it nevertheless was a bit odd to hear it from a somewhat different type businessman.

THE PENDULUM SWINGS It is apparent the pendulum is swinging too far is inevitable. It swings too far, so it will swing too far going back. Had not the New Deal, in the chief principles of which most we believe, deserted some of the principles and attempted to rush others, the pendulum would not now be swinging so far in the opposite direction.

Because the wages and hours law was given too little time to be in effect before the back of it started clamoring and fighting to rush through in a year provisions set for five years, it is in danger.

The wages and hours law did much to eliminate certain sweatshops and sweatshop methods. It could not touch those evils except they were engaged in interstate commerce but it did do constructive work. Yet the law, despite its faults, was a step forward.

Not content with the orderly processes of the law itself, certain interests began to attempt to force it, before indeed, the original implications and effects of the law had been absorbed. Hence, the law itself is in danger.

It all comes of trying to do not two things at once, but five or six things. The result has been a growing hostile attitude. This many of the New Deal appointees accelerated with a stupid, "public opinion be damned" attitude.

It is a sort of spontaneous revolt against the New Deal spending. Out of the 1940 campaign must come the next plan. Ladies and gentlemen will please hold onto their hats.

If He Betrays One Friend to Get Ahead, Will He Hesitate to Betray Another?

By ROBERT QUILLLEN.

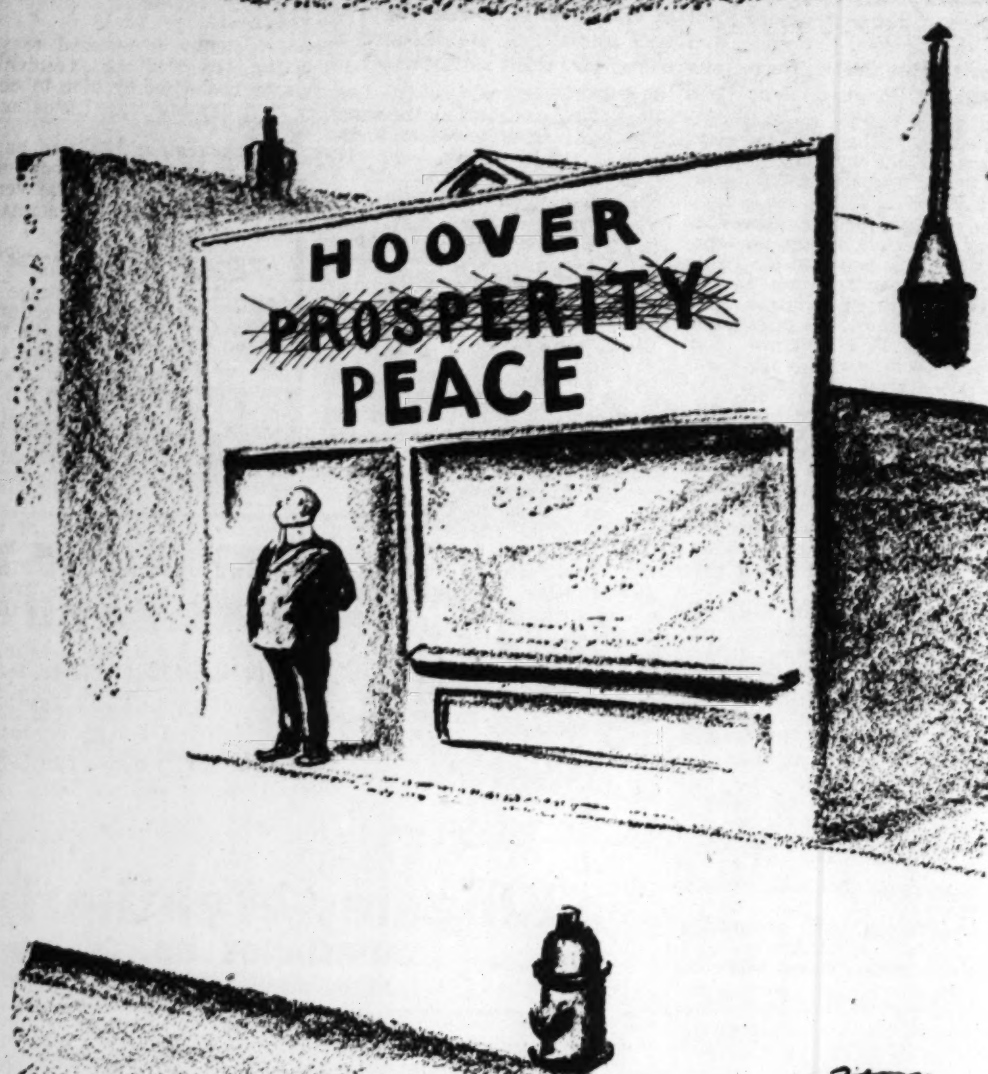

How dreadful are the sins of other people! When Japan, in complete violation of her treaty pledges, began the campaign to absorb Manchuria and China, we unsophisticated Americans were horrified and our equally simple statesmen planned measures of reproof and retaliation.

And when the Japanese blandly excused their perfidy on the grounds that conditions had changed and they were not obligated to fulfill a contract that no longer served their interests, both Americans and Britons called them immoral primitives without ability to understand the white man's standard of honor.

You can break your word merely because conditions have changed. Ask any white gentleman. It simply isn't done.

But observe what has happened on the other side of the world. In the darkest days of the World War, when the Italians had quit trying; when regiments of the French army had mutilated and the high command had ordered every tenth man shot; when America had scarcely started, and England seemed to face the job alone, English statesmen won the support of the world's Jews by promising them a nation of their own in Palestine.

When peace came, the Jews moved in, bringing prosperity and improvements

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

SUMMER EATING.
Yesterday I was saying something about midsummer blessings, but I didn't finish what I wanted to say. For example, I didn't want to mention peaches or figs or watermelons or cantaloupes or apples or chicken pie. And I don't believe anyone can feel satisfied about any discussion of midsummer blessings who leaves out of the picture these good things to eat.

Take this one item of peaches. Several good friends have sent us baskets of peaches, the grandest I ever saw. The "Boss" has fixed them up in every form—sliced chilled peaches for breakfast, with cream—also sorts of salads with peaches plentifully worked in and frozen in pretty creations of one sort and another—peach cobbler! And I mean peach cobbler with butter sauce! And then she says, put some in the form of preserves, others in pickled style, and so on. No, she didn't brandy any of them!

Every morning at daylight I go out to feed the chickens, and I find it most convenient to go by the fig tree on my way. That is the time of the day to eat figs, while the dew is still on them. You don't need any artificial refrigeration for figs, provided you have your own trees and are willing to get up at daylight. My good friends of the various families of birds try to beat me to the figs every morning. A certain cardinal seems to get particular joy as he sits near by on a light line, holding his gorgeous head in the air, as if to say, "You can have what I have left."

And then when I get in the chicken yard every morning, I like to take a bite or two from the apples that have fallen during the night, sharing the rest with the chickens. I used to think the best way to eat apples was to bake them and pour some cream over them, but I wonder if one could find a better way than sitting down in a chicken yard, with several chickens in your lap, eating apples with them.

And that leaves the watermelons and cantaloupes. They tell us that the melon crop was short this year, but the Atlanta markets have certainly afforded some very delicious watermelons and cantaloupes, and at most reasonable prices. I tried for several years to grow watermelons and cantaloupes, but I have decided that I am not so good on that assignment. I prefer to devote the space I used to have for melons to yams and peanuts and other vegetables that I do seem to have better success in growing.

Thank the Lord for these good things to eat in the good old summertime.

expressing their preferences, or from giving information about their work.

Roosevelt said the bill did not "in any way cover the multitude" of state and local employees "who are candidates for federal offices on the same ballot with candidates for state and local office." He added that "it is held by many who have examined the constitutional question" that congress has the authority to so extend objectives of the bill.

Expressing agreement with the President on this score, Senator Hatch told reporters he would propose such a revision at the next session.

The President's action in signing the bill brought expressions of gratitude from both Democratic and Republican legislators.

Senator Hatch, co-author of the legislation with Senator Sheppard, Democrat, Texas, and Senator Austin, Republican, Vermont, said he was "deeply gratified." Austin, the acting Republican leader, said "the sanctity of the ballot has prevailed." Sheppard, who was chairman of the committee which investigated charges of politics in relief last year, commented that it was "very gratifying."

Entitled an act to "prevent perniciolous political activities," the law prohibits federal employees in all but top ranking positions from participating in national political campaigns or management. Exceptions are made for the President, cabinet members, members of congress and other policy making officials.

What Act Forbids.

It also forbids: Intimidation or coercion with intent to interfere with a national election; promises of employment or payment in exchange for votes; solicitation or receipt of campaign contributions from persons drawing relief money and furnishing for political purposes of lists of persons receiving federal relief money.

Mr. Roosevelt informed the legislators that he was addressing the message to them because there had been "so many misrepresentations, some unpremeditated, some deliberate," in regard to his attitude on the bill.

Furthermore, he said it was "well known" that he had consistently advocated the objectives of the measure. He added that while there had been suggestions that "partisan political reasons" had entered "largely into the passage of the bill," he was not concerned about this.

"It is my hope," he continued, "that if properly administered the measure can be made an effective instrument of good government."

F. D. R. Answers Questions.
The President said Attorney General Murphy had advised him that the Hatch bill was constitutional. It could not "properly preclude government employees from the exercise of the right of free speech or from their right to exercise the franchise." Many inquiries have been made of him, the President said, "asking what a government employee may or may not do" under the terms of the bill.

He has been asked by government employees, he continued, whether they would lose their positions if they merely attended political meetings.

"The answer is, of course, no," the President said.

He made the same reply—"Of course, no"—to inquiries on whether employees would lose their jobs if they contributed voluntarily and without solicitation to party or individual campaign funds, if they merely expressed their opinions or preferences publicly— orally, by radio, or in writing—without doing so as part of an organized political campaign.

He also said citizens receiving loans from the Home Owners Loan Corporation, Farm Credit Administration, Federal Security Administration, Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other government lending agencies, would not be subject to the terms of the act, nor would farmers receiving farm benefits.

Likewise, he declared government employees belonging to Young Republican Clubs, Young Democratic Clubs, Civil Service Reform Associations, League of Women Voters, American Federation of Labor, Congress of Industrial Organizations, and similar bodies would not violate the act because of mere membership in these organizations.

BAPTISTS' LEADER PRAISES ATLANTA

Rushbrooke Off Today To File Alliance Protest on Persecution.

By its entertainment of the sixth Baptist World Alliance congress, Atlanta has made a name for itself that will "thrill the souls" of Baptists the world over, Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke, new president of the alliance, declared yesterday afternoon in a statement issued as he prepared to leave for Washington en route to his home in London.

He fervently thanked the people of the city for the cordial and hospitable reception given the World Baptists and this morning he will call upon Governor Rivers and Mayor Hartsfield to "say good-bye" to the city and state through these officials. He leaves at noon.

Dr. Rushbrooke is to call on representatives of several foreign nations in the United States capital in regard to protests against religious persecutions made by the alliance in congress here. The congress specifically named Rumania and Russia.

The new president will confer with Baptist leaders in New York city before sailing for London Wednesday aboard the Queen Mary.

Dr. Louie D. Newton, honorary second associate secretary of the alliance and chairman of arrangements for the congress here, will accompany Dr. Rushbrooke to see the Governor and mayor today.

Dr. Rushbrooke's statement of farewell follows in full:

"To the People of Atlanta: You have welcomed the Baptist World Congress with unparalleled generosity and unbounded hospitality. It is literally true that I have no words to express what is in my heart and in the hearts of many thousands. Before the congress met, my association with you led me to write a foreword to the official program, which included the following paragraph: 'We rejoice in the cordial good will pervading all sections of the population in their relations with one another, and the hearty co-operation that, without distinction of race or denomination, has marked the preparation for our welcome.'"

"Atlanta and the southland to which it belongs have, we believe, something of real worth to offer to the world-fellowship which we represent; and we shall return to our homes profoundly thankful if by the grace of God our congress has brought spiritual profit to our fellow Baptists and to our fellow Christians of every name, and sown seed from which a harvest of good shall be reaped in the community that so generously received us."

"The cordial good will of Atlanta (and I might add of Georgia) has proved a mighty stream that simply broke through all banks and overflew in thoughtful courtesy and kindness. Atlanta and the southland have surpassed our hopes in the religious stimulus they have afforded and especially the stimulus to evangelism. It is the hope and prayer of us all that with the measure you have meted to us, the blessing of God may be meted to you, 'good measure, pressed down, shaken together and running over.'"

"Atlanta henceforth its own place in the consciousness of Baptists throughout the world. Its spirit and the personalities embodied here and the inspirations received here, have made your city a name that will ever thrill the souls of those who have been your guests during great and blessed days."

"J. H. RUSHBROOKE, President of the Baptist World Alliance."

DEPARTING PRISONER LEAVES TEETH IN CELL

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 2.—(AP)—One prisoner left the jail here in such a hurry he left behind a half a set of false teeth. Policeman J. L. Woods said the "store" teeth were found in an empty cell during the morning clean-up. Owner may obtain said teeth upon proper identification.

75 PER CENT AXED FROM FUND BILL

house, congress was ambling along toward an adjournment which everyone thought would come some time Saturday night. The general opinion was that the housing bill would be rejected as quickly as was the rest of the pending program.

There also was the possibility that the house might get a chance to act on a series of widely divergent amendments to the wage-hour law.

The farm loan issue came up in connection with the third deficiency appropriation bill. The appropriations committee trimmed the measure from $215,000,000 requested by the President's budget bureau, to $54,191,000. The reduction, in addition to the farm loan figure, also included dropping $2,000,000 in supplemental funds for the wage-hour administration and cutting to $10,000,000 a proposed item of $25,000,000 for buying and storing war supplies not produced here. However, the house restored $1,000,000 of the wage-hour funds before passing the bill.

Officials of the wage-hour administration had said that unless the $2,000,000 were granted they would be seriously hampered in catching up on a backlog of 10,000 complaints which must be investigated. The division, it was added, has been falling behind on current complaints at a rate of 200 a month and wanted the extra appropriation to put 500 new inspectors in the field and also to build up its legal staff.

The farm loan measure was intended for the Commodity Credit Corporation, to restore capital impaired by previous loans. The corporation makes loans to farmers at levels above market quotations, to keep surplus production from beating prices down.

Debate brought out that the corporation has but $9,000,000 left uncommitted with which to continue the program.

Wallace, discussing the committee's action with reporters, blamed an "irresponsible opposition." He added:

"If it is the intent of congress to do away with the commodity loan program, the farmers should know. It is conceivable that action of this sort would bring us back to a price situation as serious as in 1932. I want responsibility for the situation clearly understood. I would be derelict in my duty if I did not state the situation."

Wallace said that if the loan program were continued, corn farmers who co-operated with this year's production program could get about 55 cents a bushel for their corn by placing it under loan. Without the loan, those farmers, he said, would do well to get 25 cents a bushel.

The situation concerning the amendments to the wage-hour law developed when Chairman Sabath, Democrat, Illinois, of the house rules committee, filed a report of his committee recommending that the three sets of proposed changes in the law be considered.

The committee made the recommendation last Thursday after John L. Lewis, CIO leader, and a spokesman for the AFL, had vigorously opposed such action. The amendments differ chiefly with regard to application of the law to employees handling agricultural products. One set, approved by the house labor committee, would exempt workers performing restricted operations connected with the handling and processing of farm products. Another, by Representative Barden, Democrat, North Carolina, would exempt a much larger number of such workers. A third measure contains so-called "non controversial" amendments, common to both other bills, but none relating to agriculture. The changes proposed in this legislation would exempt certain "white collar" workers, operators in small telephone exchanges and telegraph messengers.

While the house committee possibly was least drastic in its treatment of funds requested for national defense, it cut the $7,300,000 recommended for the civilian pilot training program to $3,000,000.

NEWS REPORTER ERRS IN WRITING INTERVIEW WITH FINANCIAL HEAD

Yesterday your financial reporter learned that he quoted Mr. Kemp erroneously when the interview read "10% hesitate to borrow because of false pride."

"Mr. Reporter, what I said was that pride shouldn't make a man hesitate about borrowing. Pride should encourage him to borrow. Pride is being able to pay off old debts and pride in re-establishing credit is usually the incentive behind every dollar of borrowed money. And, as I mentioned, the industrial people will gladly loan such a man ills run on and on until he finds himself 'sick and tired of it all.'"

"There's really no such thing as false pride. A man has it or he hasn't. And speaking of pride, the Industrial Loan and Security Co. will be proud to give financial aid to those in need. They will gladly grant a loan to deserving people on personal endorsements or any form of collateral. The rates are low; monthly repayments are small—and over a period of six months to two years as desired."

This is one of a series of advertisements covering interviews with Mr. Kemp which appears regularly in this paper. Mr. Kemp is executive vice president in charge of the Industrial Loan & Security Company at 221 Grant Building. Visit Mr. Kemp. He will gladly advise you on all money matters.

$50 to $1,000 at Once

"In my everyday advice to those who seek financial aid, I say 'Be sure to get ALL the money you need to PAY OFF ALL OLD DEBTS' . . . and have some extra money for emergencies."

"By so doing, a man becomes really proud of himself. His family is proud, too, because they don't have to dodge bill collectors any more. There's a vast change in his work, because there's a load of debt off his mind. The future looks brighter. The debt-laden past is gone."

"So, you see, if a man really has a vestige of pride, he'll get rid of his old debts, especially when it's so easy to borrow and so easy to repay. It's the man who has entirely lost his pride that lets his

F. D. R. Message Interprets Hatch Act

Roosevelt Tells Congress He Is Grandfather of Law and Postulates Its General Principles.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—(AP) The text of President Roosevelt's message on the Hatch bill follows:

To the congress of the United States:

Because there have been so many misrepresentations, some unpremeditated, some deliberate, in regard to the attitude of the executive branch of the government in relation to senate bill 1871, "an act to prevent pernicious political activities," and because a number of questions have been raised as to the meaning and application of some of its provisions, I deem it advisable at the time of executive approval to make certain observations to the congress of the United States.

The genesis of this legislation lies in the message of the President of January 5, 1939, respecting an additional appropriation for the Works Progress Administration. I said in that message: "It is my belief that improper political practices can be eliminated only by the imposition of rigid statutory regulations and penalties by the congress, and that this should be done. Such penalties should be imposed not only upon persons within the administrative organization of the Works Progress Administration, but also upon outsiders who have in fact in many instances been the principal offenders in this regard. My only reservation in this matter is that no legislation should be enacted which will in any way deprive workers on the Works Progress Administration program of the civil rights to which they are entitled in common with other citizens."

Furthermore, in applying to all employees of the federal government (with a few exceptions) the rules to which the civil service employees have been subject for many years, the measure is in harmony with the policy that I have consistently advocated during all my public life, namely, the wider extension of civil service as opposed to its curtailment.

It is worth noting that nearly all exemptions from the civil service which have been made during the past six years and a half, have originated in the congress itself and not in the executive.

CONSISTENTLY ADVOCATED OBJECTIVES TO BILL

Furthermore, it is well known that I have consistently advocated the objectives of the present bill. It has been consistently suggested that partisan political reasons have entered largely into the passage of the bill; but with this I am not concerned, because it is my hope that if properly administered the measure can be made an effective instrument of good government.

As is usual with all bills passed by the congress, this bill has been examined, on its receipt at the executive offices, by the appropriate departments or agencies. In this case the attorney general of the United States and the civil service commission.

The attorney general has advised me that it seems clear that the federal government has the power to prescribe as qualifications for its employees that they refrain from taking part in other endeavors which, in the light of common experience, may well consume time and attention required by their duties as public officials. He points out, however, that such qualifications cannot properly preclude government employees from the exercise of the right of free speech or from their right to exercise their franchise.

The question of constitutionality being resolved in favor of the bill, our next inquiry relates to the exercise and preservation of these rights. It is obvious that the intent of the bill is to follow broadly the provisions of civil service regulations that have existed for many years in regard to political activities of federal employees.

F. D. R. POSTULATES BROAD PRINCIPLES

It is because I have received and will continue to receive so many queries asking what a government employee may or may not do that it seems appropriate at the outset to postulate the broad principle that if the bill is administered in accord with its spirit, and if it is in the political administration without abuse, oppression or groundless fear, it will serve the purpose intended by the congress.

For example, I have been asked by employees of the government whether under this law they would lose their positions if they merely attend political meetings. The answer is, of course, no.

I have been asked whether they would lose their positions if they contributed voluntarily to party or individual campaign funds without being solicited. The answer is, of course, no.

I have been asked whether farmers receiving farm benefits would be bound by the terms of the bill. Again the answer is no.

I have been asked if government employees who belong to Young Republican Clubs, Young Democratic Clubs, Civil Service Reform Associations, the League of Women Voters, the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and similar bodies are subject to the penalties of the measure because of mere membership in these organizations. The answer is no.

There will be hundreds of similar questions raised in the actual administration and enforcement of this bill. Such questions will be asked in most cases by individuals in good faith. And it is only fair that they should receive an answer. I am, therefore, asking the attorney general to take the necessary steps through the new civil liberties unit of the Department of Justice in order that the civil rights of every government employee may be duly protected and that the element of fear may be removed.

I have been asked if the bill applies to veterans—Civil War, Indian Wars, the War with Spain, the World War—retired officers and men of the army, navy and marine corps who, though not government employees are receiving benefits or pensions of one kind or another. The answer is, of course, no.

SECURITY PAYEE NOT AFFECTED

I have been asked if the act applies to those who get government benefits under the Social Security Act in the form of old-age pensions or in the form of unemployment compensation. The answer is no.

Finally, I have been asked various questions relating to the right of a government employee publicly to answer unwarranted attacks made on him or on his work or on the work of his superiors or on the work of his subordinates, notwithstanding the fact that such attacks or misrepresentations were made for political purposes by newspapers or by individuals as a part of a political campaign.

This raises the interesting question as to whether all government officials except the President and Vice President, persons in the office of the President, heads and assistant heads of executive departments and policy determining officers appointed by and with the advice and consent of the senate must remain mute if and when they or the work with which they are concerned is attacked and misrepresented in a political campaign or preliminary thereto.

It will be noted that the language of the bill wholly excludes members or employees of the legislative branch of the government from its operation.

PEOPLE WON'T STAND FOR ANY GAG ACT

It can hardly be maintained that it is an American way of doing things to allow newspapers, magazines, radio broadcasters, members and employees of the senate and house of representatives and all kinds of candidates for public office and their friends to make any form of charge, misrepresentation, falsification or vituperation against the acts of any individual or group of individuals employed in the executive branch of the federal government with complete immunity against reply except by a handful of high executive officials. That, I repeat, would be unfair, and the great mass of Americans like fair play and insist on it. They do not stand for any gag act.

It is, therefore, my considered opinion, in which the attorney general of the United States joins me, that all federal employees, from the highest to the lowest, have the right publicly to answer any attack on misrepresentation, provided, of course, they do not make such reply as part of active participation in political campaigns.

The same definition of fair and proper administration of the bill applies to the right of any government employee, from the highest to the lowest, to give to the public factual information relating to the conduct of government affairs. To rule otherwise would make it impossible for the people of the United States to learn from those who serve the government vital, necessary and interesting facts relating to the manifold activities of the federal government. To rule otherwise would give a monopoly to originate and disseminate information to those who, primarily for political purposes, unfortunately have been given to the spreading of false information. That again is unfair and, therefore, un-American.

It is, I am confident, the purpose of the proponents of this legislation that the new law be administered so that the right of free speech will remain, even to those who serve the government; and that the government itself shall have the full right to place all facts in its possession before the public. If some future administration should undertake to administer this legislation to the detriment of these rights, such action would be contrary to the purpose of the act itself and might well infringe the constitutional rights of citizens. I trust that public vigilance will for all time prevent this.

SUGGESTS ACTION OF STATE EMPLOYEES

The attorney general calls my attention to a practical difficulty which should be corrected by additional legislation as soon as possible. For many years there has been an exception to the civil service regulation whereby employees permanently residing in the District of Columbia or in municipalities adjacent thereto may become candidates for or hold municipal office in their municipalities. This and a few similar ex-have been politically active in policy making posts.

Georgia's leaders among those affected by the law hastened to decline comment yesterday. Some of them pointed out that they considered that if they commented they would be the first to violate the provisions of the new law. But some of the boys let it be known that they aren't mad at all 'cause the situation has become so ticklish they want no part of it. They can go on holding their jobs without declaring themselves. And what could be better?

There seems to be no doubt but that there will be a "situation" in Georgia next spring and the signing of the Hatch bill leaves that situation to be worked out by the non-office holders, the congressional delegation and the state organization.

Already there is under way in the state a campaign to keep President Roosevelt from getting Georgia's 24 votes in the convention next year. There has been a flood of Garner letters into the state from Garner's Texas headquarters and a number of leaders have let it be known privately that they intend to support Garner. On the other hand there has been no active effort to line up the delegation for a third-term nomination, the talk of which has been confined to Lawrence Camp's speeches and interviews.

Governor Rivers is biding his time. He has never said he was or is "against" Roosevelt but he has given no indication of his plans. Rivers leaders generally are considered favorable to an unstructured delegation, some of them having gone so far as to get in print with their views. Chairman Jim Gillis, of the State Democratic Executive Committee, who will name the delegates if an unstructured delegation is determined on, never says anything and he has been unusually quiet concerning 1940.

One thing everyone agrees on is that there will be things stirring next year and that the issues to be drawn will figure prominently in the Governor's race, even though the main prospective candidates for Governor will strive to keep out of any skirmishing before their own race.

STATE "HATCH" LAWS FAVORED BY RIVERS

By The Associated Press. Governor Rivers asserted last night if all the states enacted legislation similar to the Hatch bill, to regulate their own employees' political activities, "it would have a very fine effect."

He said Georgia already had signed the bill sharply curbing such activities among federal workers, he said "it's a step in the right direction. Experience based on operation of the law may show some changes needed, but its spirit and intent are commendable."

He said Georgia already had made a start toward curbing political activity of its employees, citing an act of the 1939 legislature placing drastic restrictions on the 200 members of the State Highway Patrol.

The Governor also commented that the Hatch bill appeared to coincide in some phases with his ideas for a state civil service act. He has asked two successive legislatures to enact a merit system for Georgia's 6,500 employees. Both requests were rejected.

Vice Chairman Zach Arnold

said, probably not more than two or three of the 120 state Democratic executive committee members held federal jobs. He disclosed no names and made no comment on the legislation.

Asked for comment on the Hatch bill, Chairman W. L. Miller, of the State Highway Board, said "it's right down my alley."

At the outset of the 1938 campaign for state offices, Miller told road department employees not to use state equipment for political purposes and warned them against "getting the department into politics."

He said "President Roosevelt's suggestion that the bill's provisions should be extended to cover states would help materially in putting state government on a business and merit basis."

UNEMPLOYED RAIL WORKERS MAILED $31,300 BENEFITS

Atlanta Office Sends Out Checks Under Jobless Insurance Act During First Two Weeks of July.

Benefit checks totaling $31,300 were mailed to unemployed railroad workers from the Atlanta office of the Railroad Retirement Board during the first two weeks of July, it was announced yesterday.

Checks went to workers under the railroad unemployment insurance act. They were payable to those who earned not less than $150 with the railroads during 1938, who were totally unemployed, able to work, and not otherwise disqualified under the act.

Since the office was opened here last spring, more than 2,000 claims for unemployment insurance have been adjudicated.

The Atlanta offices of the board include a regional office, serving the southeast, and a district office serving Georgia and the western sections of North and South Carolina. In addition to unemployment insurance, the board also administers the railroad retirement act.

WPA TO SLASH 250

GEORGIA KEY JOBS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—(AP)—WPA officials have informed congress they intend to cut about 11,000 administrative employees off the rolls in the next two or three months, including 250 in Georgia.

Dallas Dort, assistant WPA commissioner, told a house appropriations subcommittee in testimony made public today that the work projects administration's administrative personnel would be cut from 30,500 to about 20,000 by the end of September.

Dort furnished this information in requesting authority for the WPA to use an additional $2,000,000 of its funds to give the terminated employees their accrued annual leave.

MRS. W. G. COOPER, WIDOW OF FULTON HISTORIAN, DIES

Took Active Part in Civic and Church Affairs; Services To Be Held at Spring Hill Today.

Mrs. Walter G. Cooper, widow of the Fulton county historian, died early yesterday at a private hospital after an illness of two weeks. Her home was at 1143 St. Charles place, N. E.

Her late husband was the author of "The Story of Georgia" and "The History of Fulton County." She was a native of Mitchell county and was a graduate of Shorter College.

Active in Church Work. Moving to Atlanta shortly after her marriage, she took an active part in church and civic affairs and was a past president of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of the West End Baptist church, a member of the Joseph Habersham chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. At the time of her death she had been a member of the Druid Hills Baptist church for 10 years.

Mrs. Cooper was the former Miss Belle Walton Bacon; daughter of Robert J. Bacon and Isabelle Walton Bacon, both members of prominent Georgia families. Surviving are four daughters, Misses Cornelia E. and Belle B. Cooper, of Atlanta; Mrs. Claude Christopher, of Griffin, and Mrs. Charles C. Bell, of Canton; a son, Walter G. Cooper Jr.; two sisters, Miss Laura Bacon, of Atlanta, and Mrs. T. M. Callaway, of Wadley; a brother, R. J. Bacon, of Albany, and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at Spring Hill by Dr. Louis D. Newton. Burial will be in West View cemetery under direction of H. M. Patterson & Son.

Services Today. Pallbearers will be W. C. Meredith, Alton Colcord, Thomas D. Body Sr., J. Wharton Humphreys, Thomas B. Branch Jr., Stephens Crockett, Boyce Graham and Fred L. Russell Jr.

The Dawson county board of education has set August 28 for the opening of Dawsonville High school.

CALOMEL NIGHT NOW A PLEASURE

The old time calomel was the doctor's favorite remedy for biliousness or so-called "torpid liver," so prevalent in hot weather, but it had some serious drawbacks from the standpoint of the patient. The nauseating and sickening after-effects and the necessity to follow it with a dose of Epsom salts made many of us hate to take it. Now you can really enjoy your calomel, for Calomel makes calomel-taking a pleasure. They give you the combined effects of calomel and salts, helping Nature to expel the sour, stagnant bile and washing it out of the system.

One or two Calomels at bedtime with a glass of water or sweet milk—that's all. Next morning your system feels clean and refreshed, your head is clear, your spirit bright, and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish and go about your work or pleasure.

Genuine Calomels are sold only in checker-board (black and white) packages bearing the trade mark "Calomel." Refuse imitations. Family package only twenty-five cents; trial package ten cents, at your dealer's. (Adv.)

Hartsfield Is 'Target' for Army Bombers

Constitution Staff Photo—H. J. Clayton.

Mayor Hartsfield, second from right, reads a message dropped from a bomber yesterday as the army celebrated the 30th anniversary of the purchase of its first plane. With him, left to right, are Colonel Clifford C. Early, Major Sam L. Ellis and W. K. Jenkins.

3 ARMY BOMBERS DROP NOTE HERE

Message of Preparedness to Mayor Forms Part of Corp's Anniversary.

Three bombers flew out of Alabama yesterday, dropped a message of peace and preparedness to Mayor William B. Hartsfield, at the municipal airport, and disappeared over the eastern horizon; all part of the Army Air Corps' observance of the 30th anniversary of the army's first purchase of a military plane.

The performance was repeated in hundreds of other American cities. The three planes which paid their respects to Atlanta had previously flown over Opelika, La., Newnan and LaGrange, proceeded to Augusta from here, and then returned to their Maxwell Field base.

Planes from Langley Field, Va., visited Savannah, while other Maxwell Field planes flew over Moultrie and Valdosta. In addition to Maxwell and Langley, army planes left Mitchell Field, Long Island; Selfridge Field, Mich.; Barksdale Field, La.; Randolph Field, Texas; Chanute and Scott fields, Ill.; and Lillington Field, Colo., on similar missions. All flights began simultaneously with a signal from President Roosevelt.

Pacific coast airfields varied the national program, and sent up no mass formations. Instead the aviators stationed at Hamilton and March fields co-operated with other military and civilian authorities in exercises involving an anti-aircraft warning net.

Air Corps detachment at the municipal airport here celebrated with an open house for the public at large, and a noon luncheon for military and governmental officials.

FOUR ARRESTED IN LOTTERY RAID

$2,000 in 'Bug' Tickets, Adding Machine Confiscated.

Lottery tickets representing an estimated "take" of about $2,000, and an electric adding machine were confiscated yesterday afternoon when City Detectives H. R. McCurley and Henley Wilbur raided an alleged "bug" check-up station at 379 Newport street and arrested four negro women.

The women, listed as Mary Smith, 38, Cecilia Rogers, 32, Sara Williams, 21, and Lillian Toller, 20, were held under $1,000 bond. All of them gave their address as 379 Newport street.

clipping the wings of our planes or flying with motors which last only five hours. Moreover, we used standard equipment with full military loads.

More in keeping with the threatening role of bombers in world power politics, army and civilian volunteers on the Pacific coast tested methods of defense against air raids, manning a warning net extending from Canada to Mexico.

Reunion for Pioneers. The day's celebration centered at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, where the air corps displayed modern machines and motors to crowds estimated at more than 100,000. A handful of army officers and civilians who learned to fly in the pioneer days of mechanical flight held a reunion there.

In the national capital, another group of pioneers placed a wreath under the wings of the first army plane, now a prized exhibit of the Smithsonian Institution. Then they exchanged reminiscences across the river at Fort Myer, Va., where the Wright brothers 30 years ago met the army's requirement of a machine that would actually fly and attain a speed of at least 40 miles an hour.

Circle Over Georgia. President Roosevelt pressed a button at the White House that flashed the starting signal for the parade of aerial might from nine army air ports. Except for the warplanes of the first wing of the Mobile General Headquarters Air Force, which participated in the warning net exercises, virtually every serviceable army plane took to the air, officials said.

Eighteen pursuit craft from Langley Field, Va., flew over a route that included Washington and Baltimore. As many bombers followed a great circle over the Carolinas and Georgia.

New York and Philadelphia saw bombers from Mitchell Field, L. I. Chicago witnessed a formation of 15 pursuit planes from Selfridge Field, Mich., machines from other fields roared over population centers within a radius of several hundred miles.

New Records Set. The new records of the biggest bomber, the Boeing B-17, were announced at Wright Field as follows: Closed course speed mark of 166.32 miles an hour over a 3-107 mile course between Dayton and Rockford, Ill., with a 4,400-pound payload; and an altitude mark of 33,000 feet with a payload of 11,000 pounds.

Carrying a crew of seven commanded by Major Caleb V. Haynes, the plane landed at 5:22 a. m., at the end of a flight which started Tuesday afternoon.

Officials said the altitude mark exceeded a record of 30,551 feet established by Germany on June 4 last year, but cited no comparative record for the speed mark.

tion anniversary to conjure up a parallel between the Germany of 1914, which they pictured as cowering on all sides by covetous enemies, and the Germany of 1939, described as encircled by the same group of jealous powers.

This difference, however, was emphasized in every speech and order of the day: Kaiser Wilhelm's Germany was caught unprepared; Fuehrer Hitler's Germany is prepared and unbeatable.

47 HURT AS 3 BUSES OF D.A.V. GROUP CRASH

ARLINGTON, Mass., Aug. 2.—(UP)—Forty-seven persons were hurt tonight when three buses carrying about 80 disabled American veterans of the World War, their wives and children, were involved in a triple collision.

The group, part of a fleet of 19 buses carrying 500 delegates to the veterans' national convention, were returning from a sightseeing trip through Lexington and Concord.

Trousers March to the Front In Review of Paris Winter Styles

Zulus and Zouaves Make Fashion Headlines; New Hobble Skirts Appear; 'Bobbin' Silhouette Comes Out Wide in Middle and Narrow at Both Ends.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—(AP)—Zulus and Zouaves made style headlines today as trousers marched to the front ranks in reviews of Paris winter fashions.

Full evening skirts were slit up the front to show Zouave trousers of striped silks ballooned out over tight ankle bands. Afternoon skirts were cut out square in front to disclose satin knickerbockers with legs in different colors.

ult Brown, a smart new muddy shade, led off for winter coats and suits, evening frocks and furs. New hobble skirts appeared. A "bobbin" silhouette came out wide in the middle and narrow at both

BALINESE WOMEN TOO COMPETITIVE ON HONEYMOON

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(UP)—Mrs. Evelyn Fonda was reported on her way to Florida today for a divorce after leaving her husband in the South Sea Islands at Bali where she said his interest in the island maidens broke up their honeymoon.

Mrs. Fonda, who came back to this country under her maiden name, Evelyn Delbario, said her husband still is in Bali "looking at those Balinese women." The husband is Harry Fonda, cousin of movie actor Henry Fonda.

"No husband should ever be taken to Bali on a honeymoon," Mrs. Fonda said. "At least I could not stand the competition."

Bride To Don Mother's Wedding Dress For Saturday's Reception

By Sally Forth.

SENTIMENT will play an important part in the selection of the exquisite gown to be worn by Mrs. Heinrich Alexander Walter next Saturday evening at the reception to be given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lamar Rucker, in Athens. The affair, previously announced in this column, will be in the nature of a wedding reception for Mr. and Mrs. Walter, who recently arrived in this country from Berlin, where the wedding took place last May. The bride, you know, is the former Dr. Nellie Peters Rucker, who spent the past several years at the University of Heidelberg.

The young bride will wear an exquisite Irish lace dress which has an interesting history. When her grandmother, the late Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, toured Europe many years ago she was accompanied by her two daughters, Nita and Louise, who are now Mrs. Lamar Rucker and Mrs. John F. MacDougald.

Among the many mementos of the trip was the exquisite lace which Mrs. Black bought in Ireland for her daughters. When her elder daughter, Nita, was married to Lamar Cobb Rucker, of Athens, at All Saints Episcopal church here on October 3, 1914, the lace was fashioned into a beautiful wedding gown for the bride.

A year later the former Louise Black donned the exquisite lace dress to wed John Fitten MacDougald on June 16, 1915, at the same church as that which provided the scene for her sister's wedding. Packed away carefully, the gown was not used again until the early 1920s, when it was worn by the former Frederica Wade, daughter of the late Judge and Mrs. Peyton L. Wade, of Atlanta, when she was married to John Billings, of New York, at Beach Island, S. C. Mr. Billings, you know, is editor of the magazine Life.

The lace gown, which has turned into a deep ecru shade with the passing of the years, has been refashioned over rustling old ivory taffeta for the late Mrs.

Black's granddaughter to wear at Saturday's party.

Among the throng of socialites who will attend the reception are a number of Atlantans, including Mrs. John F. MacDougald, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Black, George B. Black, Mr. and Mrs. Logan Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Wimberly Peters, Mrs. H. G. Kuhl, Henry Kuhl, Miss Ida Ryan, Mrs. Jean Bienville and her daughter, Mary Ellen Orme; Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Ryan, Mrs. Bessie Tompkins Fortson, Mrs. Mary G. Simmons, Belle Meador, Yolande Gwin, Helen Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Fickett, and others.

LISTED among important visitors arriving in Atlanta this week end is attractive Mrs. Van Lewis, of Jackson, Miss., who will be the guest of Mrs. Ewell Gay at her farm home, Gaymont, on Powers Ferry road. Mrs. Lewis has a number of friends here made upon previous visits to Mrs. Gay. Sally Forth recalls that the visitor's first visit here was made before her marriage when she was Henrietta Yeger and when she was one of the popular out-of-town belles attending the debut ball of Adele Ellis, who later became Mrs. Ewell Gay.

The friendship between Mrs. Gay and Mrs. Lewis began when they were enrolled at Hollins College and occupied the same room at the Virginia institution. Throughout the passing years they have exchanged visits with each other and enjoyed annual reunions with other Hollins College classmates.

Before returning to Mississippi, Mrs. Yeger, accompanied by Mrs. Gay, will motor to Asheville, N. C., where her children are attending camp.

ENLIVENING the social calendar for the forthcoming week will be a whirl of parties to be given in compliment to pretty Graham Wright, of Rome. The attractive belle is the guest of George Dargan at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs.

Atlantans Named Winners in Champagne Contest at Sea Island

Mrs. James D. Robinson Jr. dances the rumba with Peter Gibbons, dance instructor, in the champagne contest held at Sea Island Beach last Saturday evening, the contest being a regular week-end feature in the palm patio at the popular resort.

Peter Gibbons waltzes with Mrs. Edwin Johnson, of Atlanta, the contest in which applause by the audience determines the winners. Mrs. Johnson is a popular member of the Atlanta colony at Sea Island.

Milton Dargan, in Brookwood Hills.

Graham is a familiar figure in this city, having visited her hostesses upon several occasions. George, you recall, spent the Fourth of July week end with her visitor in Rome.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barry Wright, Graham possesses wavy brown hair, blue eyes and a vivacious personality that establishes her as a favorite wherever she goes.

DAINTY pink and blue cards announcing the birth of young Roger Alan Driscoll on July 26 were received recently by the legion of Atlanta friends of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Driscoll, of Charlotte, N. C., formerly of this city.

The Driscolls, you recall, built the present residence of the Fred Hoyts on Peachtree Battle avenue, where they lived until Mr. Driscoll's business interests took them to Charlotte for residence. Sally was interested to learn that their home in Charlotte formerly belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fuller and their family, who moved here from the North Carolina city a number of years ago.

Miss Peggy Ray Inspires Party Series.

Miss Peggy Ray, of St. Louis, Mo., the guest of Mrs. Harry Gunnin, is being feted at a round of interesting parties.

Miss Elizabeth Colley will be hostess today at a luncheon honoring the visitor.

Miss Jean Pentecost will entertain Monday afternoon in compliment to Miss Ray.

Miss Ray shared honors yesterday with another popular visitor, Miss Mary Calhoun, of New Haven, Conn., at the seated breakfast given by Miss Dorothy Malone at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Guests included Misses Elizabeth Colley, Ruth Robey, Selma Wright, Ann Brooks, Josephine Harrison, Sarah Malone, Mrs. Harry Gunnin and the honor guests.

Yesterday Mrs. Gunnin complimented her visitor and Miss Calhoun at a bridge-tee at the home of her mother, Mrs. Homer Davis, in Druid Hills.

Present were Misses Ray Calhoun, Dorothy Malone, Ruth Robey, Jean Pentecost, Aileen Whipple, Martha Ewing, Marjorie Armstrong, Mildred Rand, May Weltner, Patrice Poole, Selma Wright, Emily Mobley and Dorothy Crowley.

Mrs. John Wood, mother of the bride-to-be, will assist Mrs. Betty in receiving. Four of Mrs. Betty's nieces will assist, including Miss Geraldine Merritt, Miss Doris Mae Shattles, Mrs. Jarard Whitaker, and Mrs. James Clay. Mrs. L. A. Whitley will have charge of the bride's book. Mrs. W. W. Ford will present a musical program.

The gifts will be presented the bride-elect in an original and unique manner.

Parties Are Planned For Miss Heaton

Miss Virginia Heaton, of Avondale Estates, whose engagement to S. Dean Hall, of New York and Boston, and whose marriage will be solemnized on August 23 will be honored at a series of pre-nuptial parties.

Mrs. J. B. Gaddess will entertain at a luncheon tomorrow at her home in Decatur complimenting the popular bride-elect.

Mesdames J. L. Bond, A. E. Sortore and Miss Charlotte French will be hostesses at the latter's home in Decatur on August 9 at a miscellaneous shower for Miss Heaton.

On August 11 Miss Lily Shepard Davis will give a party at her home in Decatur for the bride-to-be.

Additional parties have been planned for the popular couple, the dates and nature of these affairs will be announced later.

Yesterday Mrs. Lucian Harris Jr. was hostess at her home on Peachtree road at a surprise kitchen shower and luncheon honoring Miss Heaton.

Guests included Miss Heaton and Mesdames A. E. Sortore, J. L. Bond, O. C. Waters, Harley Brown, Ford H. Pratt, T. H. Heaton, D. C. French and the hostess.

Virginia Visitor Is Honor Guest.

Miss Marjorie Humphries entertained at bridge yesterday at her home on Sixth street in compliment to Miss Sylvia Van Schelven, of Arlington, Va., who is the feted guest of Miss Ruth Brown at her home on Brentwood drive.

Mrs. Glusie Humphries assisted her daughter in entertaining her guests. A small group of friends invited to meet Miss Schelven included: Misses Marjorie Wright, Christine Jentzen, Sarah Burns, Jacqueline Smith, Emily Mitchell.

Saturday Miss Schelven will be honor guest at a bridge-luncheon and swimming party at the Druid Hills Golf Club at which Miss Mimi Capdeville will be hostess. A group of Miss Capdeville's friends invited to gather at 1 o'clock on the terrace of the club include: Misses Jane Carmichael, Sarah Burns, Mary Elizabeth Rose, Janelle Yarbrough and Mary Jane Baker.

Saxon-Boswell.

The marriage of Mrs. Wilmer Saxon and William J. Boswell was solemnized Tuesday afternoon.

After the ceremony the bridal couple left for a wedding trip to North Carolina.

Mrs. Boswell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Solomon, of Douglas, and for the past two years she has resided in Atlanta.

Mr. Boswell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Felix E. Boswell, of Greensboro. He is a graduate of Oglethorpe University and now holds a responsible position with the collector of internal revenue.

Champagne is awarded by Peter Gibbons to Mrs. C. D. Pearson, of Atlanta (at left), who won a storm of applause while she danced a waltz with the dance instructor, though she vowed she had not danced in 50 years. At the right, Esmond Brady, prominent Atlantian, receives the gentleman's prize from Miss Kaye Hayes, popular Sea Island dance instructor.

Decatur Bride-Elect Will Be Honored.

Miss Lorene Stribling, of Decatur, whose marriage to James Alford Stapleton will be an event of August 19, continues to be honored at a series of parties.

The bride-elect and her fiancé will share honors with Miss Mary Sime, of Elmhurst, Long Island, who is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. F. M. Dancy, in Decatur, at the picnic at which Mrs. Dancy will be hostess Saturday evening at Stone Mountain. Guests will include a large group of friends of the honorees.

Mrs. L. L. Stapleton, mother of the groom-elect, will be hostess on Monday evening at a buffet supper at her home on West Benson street in Decatur complimenting Miss Stribling and Miss Sime.

Misses Frances, Anne and Peel Stapleton and Miss Frances Burgess will assist in entertaining.

Guests will include Misses Barbara Throver, Beth Stillwell, Helen Kirkpatrick, Caroline Ledbetter, Virginia Cofer, Sue Morris, Martha Linder, Marjorie Couch, Jane Rogers, Lucy Stribling, Blanche Parker, Rosetta Elbrite, Read Abrams, Mildred Rodgers, Virginia Krueger, Carolyn Pounds, Mesdames Joseph Buffington, Floyd Thompson, G. A. Adams, Paul Turner, O. N. Collins, and Ben F. Colmer Jr.

Miss Jane Rogers will give a miscellaneous shower on August 9 at her home on McDonough street in Decatur for the bride-elect.

The hostess will be assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. R. J. Rogers.

Another party planned in compliment to Miss Stribling is that at which Mrs. Floyd Evans will be hostess on August 18.

Lose Weight With Every Meal Without Cutting Amount of Food

Easy To Reduce If You Know Diet Tricks

By Ida Jean Kain.

There are tricks to dieting that will make reducing easy—well easier! Some of the best are the "reducer's foods." There are no reducing foods! But there are foods which make diet a matter of substituting rather than going without.

Probably what you miss most in the diet is butter, and there is a butterless spread to take its place. The spread looks and tastes like butter and yet it contains regular butter substitutes. They contain as many calories as the real thing, about 100 per tablespoon.

There are a number of tasty low calorie biscuits to fill up the empty spaces. You can have Melba toast, either the whole wheat or white variety, at 33 calories per slice; crisp rye wafers for 20 calories each; vitamin B1 wafers, containing 15 calories each, which are particularly good in the reducer's diet since it is often low in this vitamin.

Several kinds of gluten biscuits, originated for the diabetics, are being used extensively in reducing diets. They are extremely low in calories. The bran and agar biscuits are an excellent source of bulk and contain practically no calories. Besides being low in calories these biscuits are chewy—and the chewy foods tend to satisfy.

If black coffee gives you a bad start for the day, use cream and sugar. One tablespoon of cream contains 30 calories, one lump of sugar, 25. All good reducers will tell you, however, that once you get used to your coffee black, you like it better that way. Saccharine is a sugar substitute many times sweeter than sugar and it contains no calories. You might like to try it. But don't be like the reducer who takes saccharine in her coffee and eats a piece of pastry!

There are many ways of making a diet easier and I believe you should use them. For example, the meal should always be planned around one hot dish—it is much more satisfying. If you don't have any other hot dish, take a hot soup or beverage. You will notice that I said "or." The liquid taken with the meal should be restricted to eight ounces, since excess liquid taken with food does tend to increase the size of the stomach and the appetite. I knew one reducer who was simply marking time on her diet because, although her diet was low in calories, she took too much liquid with her meals. She regularly had three cups of tea—least cream and sugar—plus at least one glass of water. That's no way to be streamlined!

Each meal should also contain some food which sticks to the ribs, such as an egg for breakfast, cheese at luncheon, lean meat at dinner. These protein foods are highly satisfying and they help to avert hunger pangs.

Use these tricks and investigate the reducer's foods now on the market. You will find it is possible to eat more and still lose weight. That's what you want, isn't it?

Shirred Basic Dress to Slenderize

By Barbara Bell.

This soft, youthful dress, with simple neckline, slim hips, and rounded bustline that do so much for those of you who take women's sizes, is a perfect fashion for your new dark sheer. Design No. 1795-B is the distinguished, simple, well-bred type that you can wear endlessly for both street and afternoon, and vary with different accessories. The paneled skirt is cut high in the front, to flatten your diaphragm and diminish your waistline. Shirring, on the shoulders and sleeve tops, serves the double purpose of giving the frock a soft, dressy look, and creating fullness where you want it.

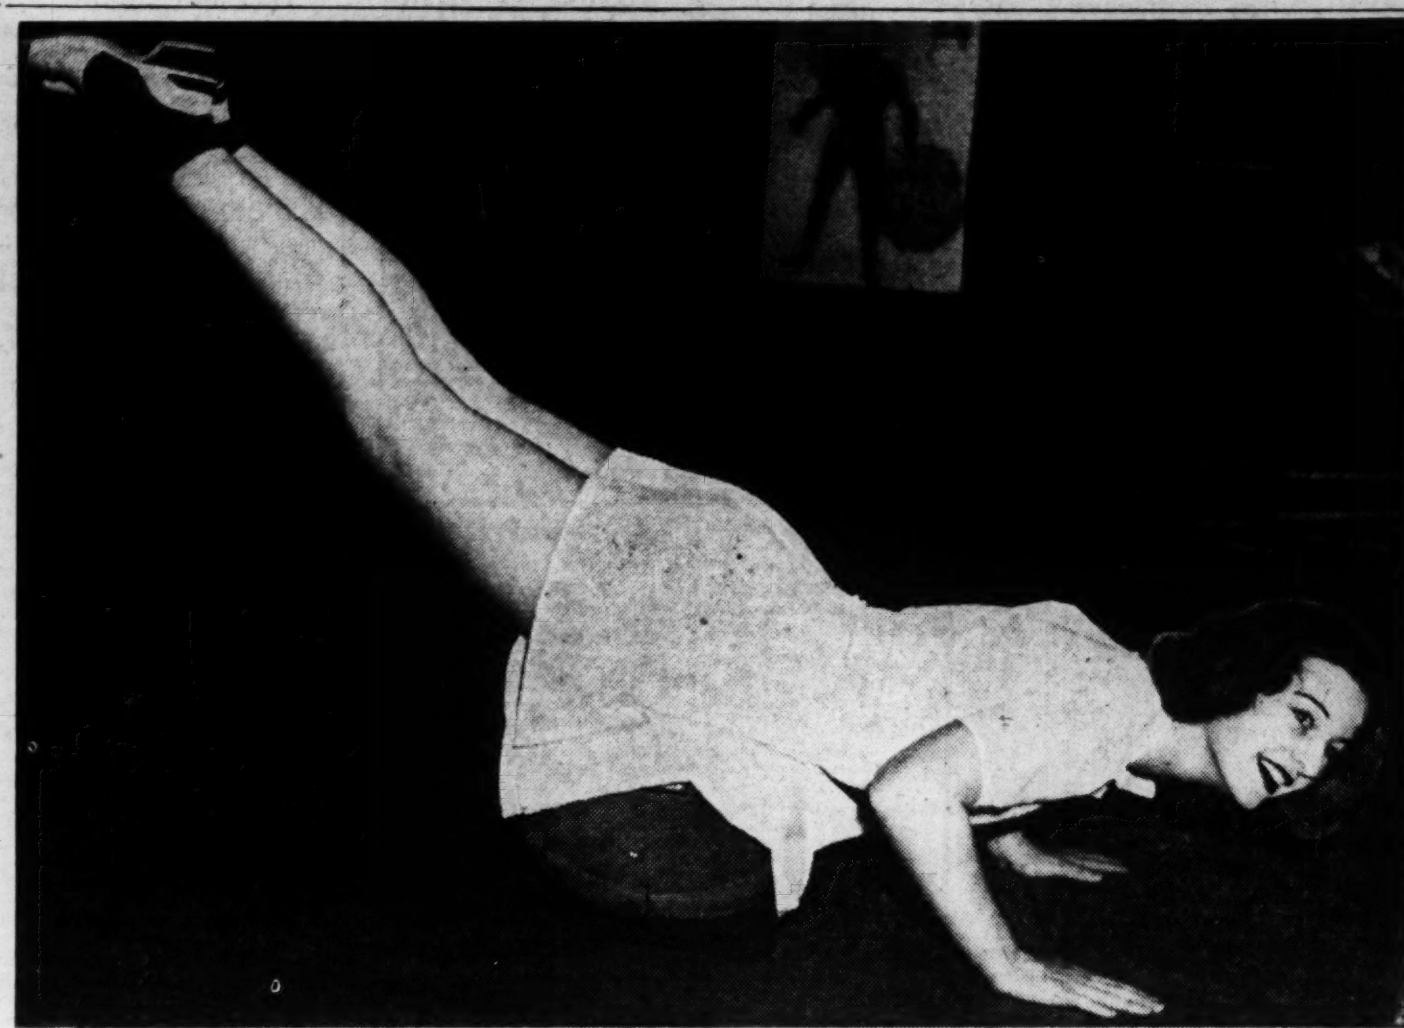

Chiffon, georgette, rayon jersey and small-figured silk prints are smart materials in which to make up this design. It's extremely easy to do, for all it looks so expensive when finished. Pattern includes a step-by-step sew chart.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1795-B is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 39-inch fabric with short sleeves. With long sleeves, 5 1/2 yards.

Send for Barbara Bell's spring and summer pattern book! Make your own smart new frocks for street, daytime and afternoon, with these simple, chic, it's easy, it's economical, to sew your own. Each pattern includes a step-by-step sew chart to guide beginners.

Price of pattern 15 cents. Price of pattern book 15 cents. Do not send stamps.

In Planning Meal, Consider Body Building Foods First

By SALLY SAVER.

Not so long ago a very thoughtful and philosophical person said to me as we passed along a busy street, "Isn't it astonishing and depressing that in a land where there is such a bountiful supply of foods, such overflowing plenty and higher standards of living than any other country on earth that one sees so very few really beautiful faces and bodies? It is understandable in a country where food shortages are the usual accepted fact, but not in this country where we have more than enough of everything."

This person knows the relationship between food and health—knows that bodies are made of the food which is eaten. If this fact could be kept clearly in mind by every person planning meals for a family, and if members of the human family could be taught to eat body-building, health-protecting foods in right balance, nutritionists say that within two or three generations we could build not only a more healthy, sturdy race, but a more beautiful people, because beauty is radiant health—clear skin, shining eyes, good posture and a happy outlook.

The human body is a complex organism requiring a large number of elements not only to operate on, but since it also rebuilds itself and makes its own repairs, it requires certain elements for replacement. Calcium, for example, is used by the body to build and repair teeth and bones, to nourish the nervous system, in the clotting of blood, to balance the mineral elements in the body to prevent rickets. The important sources of calcium are: Milk, cheese, egg yolk, turnip tops, spinach, catfish, dry beans, kale, celery and nuts. Milk and milk products are far richer in calcium than are any other foods.

Iron is an essential element in all cells of the body; iron enables the red blood cells to carry oxygen to body tissues. These are the important sources of iron: Liver, molasses, whole grain cereals, prunes, apricots, spinach, oysters, lean meat, potatoes, lettuce, egg yolk, asparagus.

Vitamin A produces growth, gives better resistance to disease, prevents certain eye infections, gives better resistance to disease in many parts of the body, particularly the respiratory region, makes for longer life, and is essential for bearing and nursing babies. Vitamin A is found mainly in: Cod liver oil, halibut liver oil, carrots, kale, spinach, tomatoes, butter, egg yolk, whole milk, cream, liver and turnip tops.

Vitamin B is necessary for growth, appetite, good digestion, greater nervous stability, and prevention of beri-beri (a nerve disease). Sources of this vitamin are: Yeast, wheat germ, whole grain cereals, egg yolk, whole milk, peas, tomatoes, spinach, beans, asparagus, carrots and liver.

Vitamin C makes well-nourished teeth and gums, better blood vessels, (growth, prevention of scurvy, and protects the bony structure against deterioration. These are principal sources of vitamin C: Oranges, lemons, grapefruit, tomatoes, green peppers, strawberries, pineapple, green peas and raw cabbage. It should be remembered that of all the vitamins, vitamin C is most perishable, and in many cases is totally or partially destroyed by heat. So to get an adequate supply of this vitamin these foods, which are excellent or good sources, should be eaten fresh and raw.

These are only a few of the needed elements but a diet which includes eggs, liver, lean meat, milk, cheese, vegetables, cooked and raw; fruits cooked and raw, whole grain cereals and bread, with enough sweets and fats to give flavor and a filling quality will more than likely furnish all the necessary elements to the average person.

Let's give this important matter of meal-planning the serious consideration which it deserves.

Sally Saver will answer questions about foods and food preparation. Write or phone, care The Constitution, or Walnut 6565.

Woman's Quiz

Q. What kind of soil does Snow-on-the-Mountain like?

A. Fertile soil for best growth, but it is most showy on poor ground in a sunny location.

Q. What is the proper position for bread and butter plates?

A. At the tip of the fork, with the butter spreader laid across the top of the plate.

Q. How may nickel fixtures be cleaned?

A. Wash with soap and water. Polish with whiting moistened with alcohol, ammonia or water. Do not use any chemicals or coarse abrasive on nickel.

Average Player Deceived By Attempted Bluff Bid

By Harold Sharpsteen.

Poker bridge in any system or lack of systems includes a battery of bluff bids popularly excused as "psychics," when as a matter of fact a true psychic forms little or no part of it.

Up-to-date bridge has a decided edge on poker. Besides offering opportunities for concealing weakness, unlike poker, bridge supplies an avenue of escape when the bluff is called by a penalty double. Against strong players, this overworked angle of bridge bidding has lost its effectiveness and poor players will innocently ignore the bluff.

Average players are most easily deceived, simply because they are advanced enough to draw inferences from the bidding. A little knowledge of psychic bidding should suffice for the average player and it should be used sparingly. Nothing serves to upset a partnership quicker and a player who persistently attempts bluff tactics invariably winds up behind the well-known "eight ball."

For instance, the bluff bidder is dealt:

S-8
H-None
D-9 6 4
C-A K Q J 6 4 3 2

PARTNER PREFERS MAJOR.

He is apt to open with one spade, followed by a bid in hearts on the second round, finally winding up by showing the club suit. But, partner, confused, continues to support one of the first-named suits until the bid may reach seven in either the majors.

At the conclusion, the bluff bidder attempts to excuse the disaster with the explanation that he was trying to engineer a penalty double all of which partner should have recognized by the bidding.

AFTER PARTNER PASSES. It is usually dangerous to make a psychic attempt without a long suit. If psychics are to be employed at all they should be restricted to situations in which partner has definitely advertised weakness by passing. This may tend to reduce the risk of carrying the bluff bid to disastrous heights.

It is dangerous to make bluff bids when vulnerable and there is little to be accomplished by bidding void or short suits in hopes of heading off opponent's probable game.

A PAST ART.

An original bluff one notrump bid, holding a trickless hand, is a past art of the amateur. The only excuse possible for such an opening is a long minor suit, which serves as an escape and occasionally encourage a belated penalty double in that suit.

Without a long escape suit to run to, and lacking a definite purpose for attempting the bid, bluff bids at best should be avoided.

Til tomorrow . . .

Style features are the shirring across the back at the waistline, the full, flared skirt with big patch pockets, the wide, notched collar and the wide sleeves. Miss Barrie's accessories are a navy and white scarf, a huge navy halo hat and shoes of navy and white.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 2.—Wendy Barrie has purchased an ivory-colored camel's hair coat for chilly evenings. Attractive features are the shirring across the back at the waistline, the skirt, very full and flared with big patch pockets, the wide, notched collar, and the sleeves, wide from the armhole to the cuff. Worn with it is a navy and white scarf, a huge navy halo hat and shoes of navy and white.

Gail Patrick, at a recent baseball game, wore a brown and white check silk dress with crisp white double linen lapels, vertical rows of stitching that descended from the bodice to widen into the umbrella skirt, accented with novelty buttons and belt. A small sailor in brown straw with jaunty white quill, white gloves, brown bag and pumps and a chapeau box-jacket completed the outfit.

The accompanying coat of navy blue alpaca features a swing skirt and bishop sleeves, the waistline accented by a wide suede belt. Joan's hat is a small turban of the dress material. Large pouch bag and pumps in navy kid, a necklace and bracelet of lacquered midget pine cones in navy blue and red on a white chain accompany the get-up.

Diplomatic Wife One Step Ahead Of In-Laws

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield: I married the youngest son in a family that was used to telling him what to do and how. They have never realized that he's grown up and they continue to give him orders. Not only his older brothers but his sister-in-law seem to think it is their duty to interfere in all our affairs and I'm about to go out of my mind. I wish you'd have something to say about meddling in-laws and also tell the victims how to behave.

G. Y.

Answer: Sister, family habits and customs are pretty much like cement, once set, always set. The youngest child in the family who's been known as the baby, remains the baby in the eyes of the parents and the older brothers and sisters. His only chance to escape their reproaches, corrections, suggestions is to move off where they can't see the need for their counsel.

In case you are situated as you can't get away, here's a true story of a wife of a youngest son who had your problem which will give the cue; but if you aren't temperamentally fitted to follow her example, you can't take the cue. She's gentle, mild mannered and, to all appearances, smooth and soft as silk. Underneath there's a will of steel. She was brought up in a family where everybody was polite to everybody—even when they were insulting. You know that sort of a clan? No harsh words are ever spoken but they have their own private, particular way of being nasty.

Well, our young wife married her husband and his family, lived with them and soon discovered that she had a mess of bosses to deal with. She listened respectfully to the older members of the clan, as they instructed her in her duty to her husband, the family friends, also how to spend her money and what to do with her time. She listened. To all intents and purposes she accepted the gratuitous advice. Then she went out on her own. She knew they couldn't run her life but she didn't bother to go to the mat with them when they tried. Eventually they signed off.

In-laws are generally infuriating when they aren't minding their own business. They are infuriated when they are told to mind their own business. So it's only in instances where both sides are diplomatic, self-contained and self-restrained that they remain friends as well as in-laws.

Allergy: Young wife says she's allergic to onions and in-laws and gives up both without a qualm.

Correct Posture Necessary For Good Dancing

Poor dancers have little fun! Collisions, black looks and bruises mark their path and dance dates come their way but seldom.

Usually, says a leading dancing teacher, these unhappy ones don't know correct posture, the simple rules for leading, following. Often they try fancy steps without knowing the basic ones properly. The man who leans back stiff as a poker, holds his partner limply at the waist, pumps her arm up and down can't possibly steer her around without casualties.

But he can whirl her through the thickest dances if he holds himself erect but relaxed, puts his one hand firmly beneath her left shoulder blade and with his other holds hers at shoulder height. Change of direction or step he indicates with a pressure of right hand or arm. Moving forward, he leads with his body.

And how about the girl who can't follow? Either she is off balance because she carries her weight back on her heels or because she doesn't relax and so hurries her steps. The right way is to balance lightly on the balls of the feet—step a split second after the man.

With elements mastered, easy then to get the basic steps perfect with the help of simple diagrams. A few hours practice at home and you're ready for variations of such smart dances as the rumba, tango and waltz. Awkward dancing is a thing of the past for you.

In our 40-page booklet, "Social Dancing Self-Taught," a well-known dancing teacher gives step-by-step directions, diagrams for basic steps and variations of the waltz, tango, rumba, Westchester, fox-trot, shag. Pointers on posture, leading, following, give you confidence, grace.

MY DAY "Goodbye, Mr. Chips!" Is Exquisitely Done

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK.—Yesterday was a busy day. I rode in the morning, did the mail and my column, and then Mrs. Charles Fayerweather brought a young friend to lunch with me. We had a pleasant time together, but I had to "speed the parting guest," for I was due across the river, at the Hudson Labor school, at 3 o'clock. Miss Hilda Smith owns this property and is very happy to have it used as a summer school for women workers. The group was gathered in front of the house under the trees before I arrived and they asked me some interesting questions. "What did I think they should try to get out of the seven weeks spent on the banks of the Hudson?" "How would one go about interesting people in a community in working conditions?" etc.

They have two English girls, a German refugee and a Swedish girl at the school this summer. While we were all having tea, I was amused to have one of the English girls say to me: "What a contrast between what you are able to do and what our Queen is free to do. I wonder if she would not give a great deal to have the same amount of freedom?"

I am sure this school does a great deal to develop the mental abilities of the girls, but I think it is equally valuable because of the health work they acquire, for they are studying practically out of doors, eat on the balcony, and swim and play together. I came back to meet Mr. Karl Hesley, the state administrator for the National Youth Administration. At 7:15, Miss Thompson and I were at dinner with Mrs. Morgenthau and her three children at their Fishkill Farm. Five of us went to Poughkeepsie afterward to see the movie, "Good-bye, Mr. Chips." I am always reluctant to see a movie taken from a book which I much enjoyed, for so often what you have loved in the book is completely spoiled. In this case, however, I think it is exquisitely done. "Mr. Chips" is so well cast and acts the part to perfection.

I knew a schoolmaster once whose life somewhat paralleled that of "Mr. Chips." He never moved into the headmaster's study and took with him only his young wife's picture, but he had the same attitude toward his boys, and the young wife and baby he lost lived in his heart. He was brought up in a family where everybody was polite to everybody—even when they were insulting. You know that sort of a clan? No harsh words are ever spoken but they have their own private, particular way of being nasty.

The English schoolmaster of this type is a fine tradition. There was a war play which came out after the World War, "Journey's End," and one of the characters was a schoolmaster, turned soldier, in a dugout in France. I suppose the qualities we admire are the ability to understand human nature and to sympathize with human weakness.

Rebuilding Youthful Stamina Most Important to Doctor

By Dr. William Brady.

Canadian reader, telling of the benefit she has obtained from following suggestions given in articles on rebuilding youthful stamina, expresses a need which is growing with the spread of knowledge of hygiene among the public. She writes:

"I now enjoy looking after my family of five, including a three-year-old, and go about my tasks with a pleasant and happy countenance. This is everything you say it is You know, you are the saviour of health and happiness at least to this house. If all doctors would devote themselves to the business of study and practice of preventing sickness and sorrow as you do, instead of trying to 'cure' . . ."

(Mrs. A. I. W.)

Pay almost any doctor a living wage to practice Preventive Medicine exclusively, and there will be no dearth of doctors to practice what I only preach. You know, Mrs. W., it is easier to tell in print precisely how to do it than it is to do it. At least I think it is, from my experience in country, city and hospital practice and my experience in preaching health in newspapers.

WEEP FOR LOVE

Selby Crowd Attends Beaseley's Party And Play a Game Called Ghost

By RUBY M. AYRES.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE. When Derek Chalmers, stodge landowner, sees dainty Stella Dawson playing a small part in a suburban London theater he forgets his vow not to marry again. Impoverished Lane Hall depresses his young wife, but she is happy after her baby is born until the Chalmers tradition puts Elizabeth in charge of nurse, then governess. Seven unhappy years make the open adoration of impetuous Pip Hurlbert welcome. There is a divorce and Derek refuses to let his baby Betty when she marries Pip. Betty pines and the doctor tells Derek she will die if separated from her mother. When Elizabeth is 16 Pip is killed in an accident and Stella is inconsolable. Elizabeth meets Kim Lawless when she trespasses in his wook to pick primroses and he tells her he hopes she comes again. Derek dies leaving half his wealth to Elizabeth if she quits her mother and her step-sister. Penelope can't understand her decision to remain with her mother. Penelope tells her she was to marry Lawless but he broke the engagement. Stella dies and Elizabeth lives with Penelope and her Aunt Thornley. She meets Kim at the Selbys' dance and then at their home. She tells her she loves him and when Penelope's illness in Paris calls her away he tells her he loves her. Penelope calls for Kim in her delirium. She recovers but has lost her singing voice. Rocky Selby repeats to Elizabeth the gossip that Kim and Penelope were secretly married. Penelope avoids Kim. Elizabeth rings and Elizabeth avoids Kim. While Elizabeth is visiting the Selbys, Barbara announces that she is coming. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT XXIV.

"You can't all go in my car," Roy declared firmly. "I'll take Elizabeth, and you'll take Barbara, won't you, Kim?" "I shall be delighted," Mrs. Selby made one last appeal to Kim. "Don't let Roy drive too quickly, will you?" Lawless laughed. "I'll take him in tow behind my own car," he promised. The vivid sunset had given place to moonlight as they drove away from the house, and Elizabeth glanced back as they turned out of the drive and shivered a little as she looked at the dark outline of High Chimneys against the pale sky.

"If I were a ghost," she said flippantly, "this would be the night I should choose to do a little jazz-walking up and down the old baronial hall."

"You'd be a darling ghost," Roy answered. "But if you're thinking of our dog ghost Bingo, dogs hate the moonlight, and I expect he's skulking somewhere in a dark cellar." He glanced over his shoulder at the following car. "Lawless can get more speed out of his engine than I can," he said, in a disgruntled voice. "But if he thinks he's going to pass us, he's mistaken."

"Don't drive too quickly," Elizabeth pleaded. He glanced down at her. "Nervous?" he asked. She nodded.

"Yes, I think I am a little. I don't like driving after dark very much."

Roy said brightly: "Well, you once drove a good many miles at midnight with Lawless."

"That couldn't be helped," she answered, but she turned her face away as she spoke and looked out over the deserted fields.

"Face in our camp!" How could Kim have said such a thing when all the time he knew.

"Very well, drive as fast as you like," she said, in a queer, excited voice. "Let's leave the others miles and miles behind—just to annoy them."

Roy laughed. "What a vixenish voice!" he protested. Elizabeth relaxed.

"I didn't mean it. It's much too lovely a night to go racing like lunatics through the country and there's no hurry to get there, is there?"

"Not when I'm with you," he answered, and then, encouraged by her silence: "Can you, Elizabeth? I'd be so good to you—I'd do everything in the wide world to make you happy."

There was infinite gentleness in her voice as she answered him. "But I shouldn't make you happy."

"That wouldn't matter," he protested eagerly. "And besides, I should be happy—just to know that you belonged to me. You should do just as you wanted. I'd let you be quite free."

"I shouldn't want to be quite free if I loved you," she said. He gave a quick sign of impatience.

"I can't understand you," he said at last. "Sometimes it seems all right. I mean—I think that I do understand you, and then you say something or do something—and it's all gone again."

"But you wouldn't like me to be always the same, would you?" she asked. "Think how flat, stale and unprofitable life would be."

Roy's old reply was to increase his speed, and presently they swept into the drive of the Beaseleys' house.

A dark drive, with thick laurel bushes on each side and old trees bending above them through which even the bright moonlight hardly penetrated.

"It's not such a nice house as yours," Elizabeth said. They drew up at the open door, and a swarm of young people came rushing out to greet them.

"Why are you so late? We thought you weren't coming? Oh, what a duck of a frock, Elizabeth! Where's Barbara? Haven't you brought her?"

"She's following with Mr. Lawless," Elizabeth explained. Dora Beaseley drew her into the house.

"Mr. Lawless!" She lowered her voice. "Isn't that the man your sister was engaged to?" "Yes."

"I hear he's frightfully good-looking," Dora giggled. She was rather a foolish young woman with the kindest heart in the world.

"It seems to be a party," Roy said, following them into the hall. "It was such fun last night."

Dora told him, "that we thought we'd go one better. Do you know everyone?" She waved an introductory hand. "You'll all soon know each other if you don't now. Give me your wrap, Elizabeth. Hello, Barbara!"

Elizabeth glanced at Barbara and away again. "She looks happy," she thought, and there was a sudden coldness around her heart, for she, too, had once driven through a summer night with Kim Lawless.

It was a very noisy party. "The parents have gone out," Dora announced. "Said they couldn't stand the racket—so we've got the place to ourselves. Of course, it's not such a romantic spot as High Chimneys, but it has its points."

They danced to radio music in the high-ceilinged drawing room, and although Elizabeth kept as far away from Lawless as possible, she soon realized that her fears were needless; he never glanced her way.

He danced with Barbara most of the time and, when at 11 o'clock refreshments were brought in, he sat on the arm of Barbara's chair. It was a quarter to twelve when Dora announced that it was time they played "Ghost."

"It's a new game we've invented ourselves," she announced. "You can go anywhere you like in the house. You can go up in the attic or down in the coal cellar, but you must be alone and not in pairs, and if you see the ghost you must scream at the top of your lungs and rush back to the drawing room, and the first home gets the prize."

There was an awed silence, till Lawless asked dryly: "And if the ghost refuses to oblige?" "Oh, we've arranged for him," Dora answered. "Someone will see him all right, and there's no need to be scared, because he's real flesh and blood—not like your old Bingo, Roy."

She crossed the big room and switched on the lights.

3 SYMPATHIZERS OF UNION SHOT IN COLORADO STRIKE

Armed Force Organized in Attempt To Dislodge New Picket Line at 4-Million Dam Project.

GREEN MOUNTAIN DAM, Col., Aug. 2.—(P)—A union picket reported three union sympathizers were shot today near the Green Mountain dam project, in northwestern Colorado, where an alleged "back to work" force of non-union workers and townspeople broke union picket lines last night.

George Judy, 17, was grazed on the right hip by a bullet.

The two other wounded were taken to Dillon, south of the dam site, for treatment, Judy said.

Meanwhile, an armed force organized in an attempt to dislodge the new picket line at the $4,000,000 project.

The group, carrying shotguns, rifles and pistols, gathered at Kremmling, 18 miles northwest of the Nogi site, after learning strikers had thrown a picket line across a state highway two miles from the project gates.

Sheriff John H. Lee, of Summit county, said he was informed "six to 10 truckloads" of strike sympathizers from Denver were en route to the project site with the intention of aiding picketers.

Meanwhile armed truces and renewed efforts at negotiation today marked activities on a strike front that reached into three other states and threatened to involve a fifth.

In Cleveland, scene of a riot in which 46 persons were injured Monday, a committee of non-strikers at the Fisher Body plant urged the Dies committee to investigate the walkout of the CIO United Automobile Workers who, they said, "have Communist tendencies."

As police demarcated a 500-yard safety zone around the factory, small groups of strike sympathizers established at homes of individual workers outside the zone. The company reported 489 of its normal force of 700 passed through picket lines to work.

Settlement Nears.

Prospects of settlement of the CIO tool and die makers strike against General Motors plants were reported as hundreds of extra police were assigned to prevent a recurrence of violence that has marked the walkout affecting 12 plants and 7,500 employees.

Resume Parleys.

As Governor Leverett Saltonstall, of Massachusetts, informed the Barre Wool Combining Company he would not leave state police on strike duty in South Barre indefinitely, company officials resumed conferences with the state commissioner of labor and industries on the AFL strike there.

Hours of negotiation at Syracuse, N. Y., left AFL truck drivers and their employers without results in a wage controversy. The union threatened a state-wide strike of over-the-road truckers at midnight.

Deadlocked after many hours of negotiation at Syracuse, N. Y., AFL truck drivers and their employers postponed until tomorrow their conferences on a wage controversy and the union indefinitely postponed its deadline for a state-wide strike of New York over-the-road truckers.

Two sticks of dynamite were thrown into the home of a non-striking General Motors Worker at Saginaw, Mich., but he extinguished the fuses with a pan of water.

Extra police were assigned to the Milton Bradley Toy Manufacturing plant in Springfield, Mass., when the management complained that non-strikers were being molested. A conference was scheduled for Thursday.

SUIT FILED TO SAVE FORT VALLEY LINE

Georgia and Fayette County Join To Nullify I. C. C. Abandonment Order.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 2.—(P)—The state of Georgia, the Georgia Public Service Commission and Fayette county entered a civil suit today in United States District Court, seeking annulment of an order by the Interstate Commerce Commission authorizing the Southern Railway Company to abandon the Atlanta-Fort Valley line.

Named as defendants were the United States, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Southern Railway Company. The complainants asked the court to set aside the ICC order on the ground that the commission is without jurisdiction to give such an order.

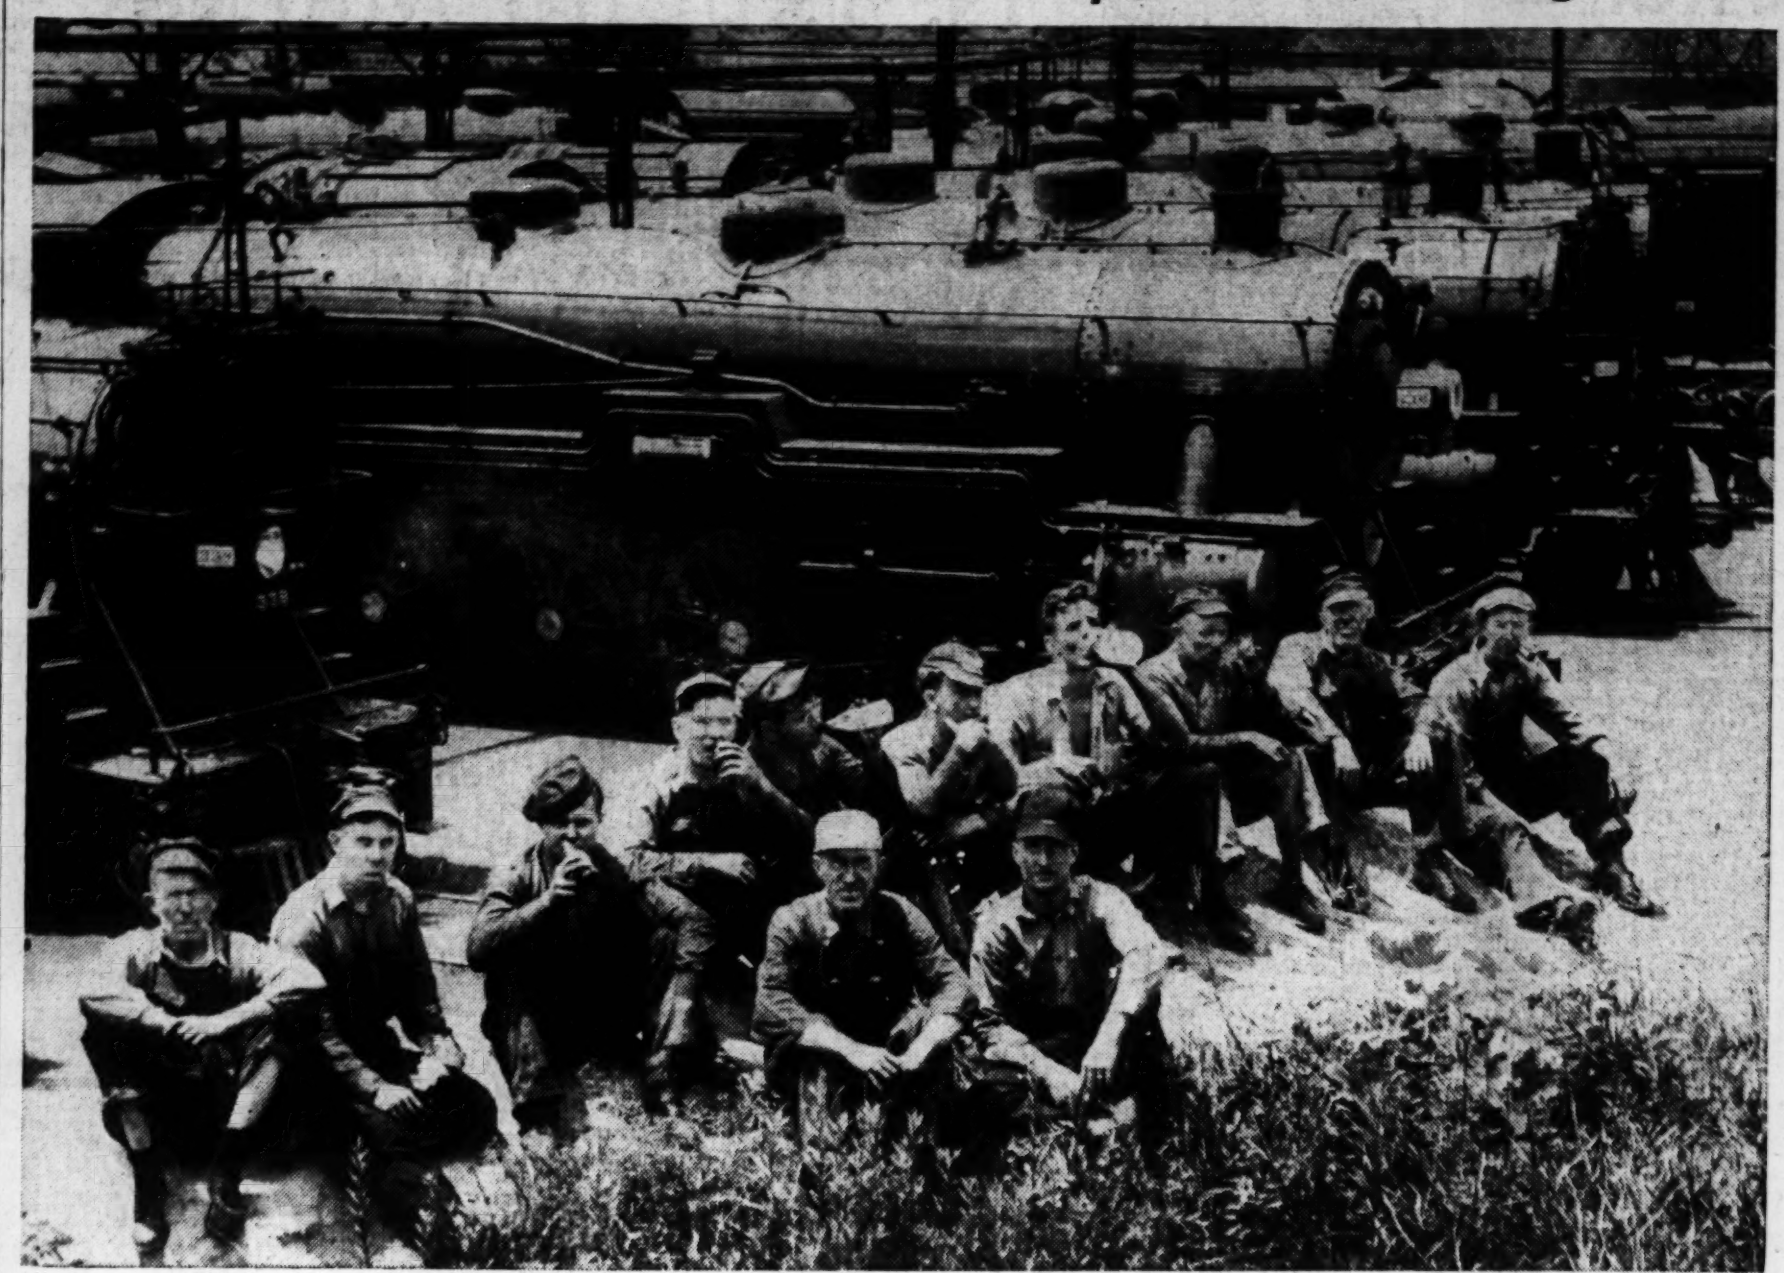

The complainants contend the Southern Railway Company sustained no loss from the operation of the Atlanta-Fort Valley line, which extends about 40 miles through Fulton, Clayton, Fayette, Spalding and Pike counties in Georgia.

Sergeant York Asks Charter for School

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 2.—(P)—Sergeant Alvin C. York, Tennessee's greatest World War hero, filed with the secretary of state today a "fundamental Christian religion" will be taught.

One of the aims of the school, set forth in the charter, "to give instruction in the Holy Bible and to teach fundamental Christian religion as taught therein."

MRS. F. B. LIPPITT DIES IN NASHVILLE

Was One of Oldest, Most Active Members of St. Luke's Episcopal Church.

Mrs. F. B. Lippitt, one of the oldest and most active members of St. Luke's Episcopal church, died Tuesday at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Jones F. Turner, in Nashville, Tenn., where she had moved a few months ago after years of residence here.

She was the widow of Frank B. Lippitt, a former choirman at St. Luke's, whose boys' choir was long an outstanding feature of the church's musical programs.

Prior to her departure for Nashville, she had devoted a lifetime of service to St. Luke's where she had been an outstanding leader in women's work for more than 40 years.

Her most prominent activities were in connection with the affairs of the Daughters of the King and her contributions to this organization had won widespread recognition not only in Atlanta but throughout the entire diocese as well.

In addition she was long actively interested in the work of St. Helena's circle and also was prominent in her efforts on behalf of the patients at the Rhodes Memorial Home.

Besides her daughter she is survived by two sons, Thomas D. Lippitt, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Lowndes M. Lippitt, of New York; a brother, Thomas F. Davis, of New Orleans, and several grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted at 3 o'clock this afternoon at St. Luke's church by the Rev. John Moore Walker and the Rev. T. V. Morrison. Burial will be in West View cemetery under direction of Brandon-Bond-Condor.

Fallbearers will be Dr. F. L. Bejeu, Charles A. Lewis Jr., Charles W. Ashurst, Dr. E. A. Bancker, Barney Dunlap Sr. and C. B. Wilmer Jr.

'WAS A FOOL,' JURIST SAYS IN LOVE SUIT

Ex-Chief Justice Recalls Rich Gifts to Steno.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 2.—(P)—Fred P. Branson, former chief justice of the Oklahoma supreme court, testified today that, after he gave money, jewels and automobiles, his one-time stenographer tormented him with demands he divorce the woman he married in 1904. Gifts, he said, cost him $60,000.

"There is only one answer as to why the defendant tolerated this," he commented. "The defendant was a fool."

The stenographer, 47-year-old Madeline Brantiff Branson, is suing for $500 a month separate maintenance. Branson contends they never were legally married because six months had not elapsed after his wife obtained a divorce in 1900.

The ex-jurist testified that several times a week Madeline would inquire:

"When are you going to get a divorce? Don't you know my people aren't fools. They know what's going on. They know you are not sending me to New York, giving me motor cars, buying me clothes and everything else for nothing."

MEADOR REUNION.

OXFORD, Ga., Aug. 2.—A reunion of descendants of the late John B. Meador will be held here Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Meador.

CLOUDS RAISE CAIN WITH POWER—IN PLUPERFECT TENSE

A sudden surge of electricity, from the passage of highly energized clouds over the Grady substation of the Georgia Power Company, near Grant Park, temporarily voided a voltage regulator yesterday afternoon, and put "out" for two minutes three feed lines serving part of the downtown business area. The regulator returned to activity uninjured.

But that isn't the whole of the story.

The ever willing and genial Joe Kling, master of phraseology and dispenser of information to the newspapers on all Power Company happenings, proceeded with considerable caution.

Informed that The Constitution had been darkened for the moment, he first suggested it was due to a split infinitive, and launched his investigation.

Further along in his pursuits, he offered the diagnosis that all had come about by the careless use of a pendent participial opening of a story by some non-professional reporter in the throes of urgent composition.

He shifted ground, finally, however, and announced that from the lexicographer's point of view—regardless of clouds and their passage near substations—the real cause had been employment of a wrong sequence of tenses in the subjunctive by a harried editor.

If anything further turned up he said, he'd let the newspapers know.

1 SLAIN, 2 WOUNDED IN BALDWIN AFFRAY

Boy Ordered To Fire on Him, Says Killer of Assassin's Mother.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Aug. 2.—(P)—A gun fight at a filling station near here left Mrs. Callie Booth, 30, dead and her 16-year-old son, Alva, and business partner, Julian Nixon, 35, critically wounded today.

A 12-gauge shotgun and a pistol were employed in an exchange of fire which Sheriff W. H. Harrison said was not witnessed by outsiders.

The sheriff quoted Nixon as saying Mrs. Booth ordered her son to open fire on him with a shotgun. Nixon, shot in the lower abdomen, told the sheriff he drew his pistol after falling to the filling station floor and emptied it toward Mrs. Booth and her son.

Four pistol bullets struck the woman, killing her. A fifth bullet struck the boy near the heart.

The bullets, which hit Mrs. Booth ranged upward, substantially Nixon's story that he fired while lying on the floor, Sheriff Harrison added.

The sheriff said he had been unable to get a clear picture of what happened before the shooting. Both the boy and Nixon, he asserted, were not expected to live.

Mrs. Booth and Nixon had been operating the filling station on the Sandersville highway, five miles south of here, about 12 months.

Officers were called to the scene last night after the boy staggered from the filling station and called for help.

TAFT CANDIDACY EXPECTED TODAY

Senator's Home County G. O. P. Formally Asks His Presidential Bid.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 2.—(P)—Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, today became the first prospective Republican nominee for president of the United States to be asked formally to declare his candidacy.

The Hamilton county (Cincinnati) Republican Executive Committee, by resolution, urged him "to allow his name to be used as first choice of Ohio's delegates to the national convention."

Informed quarters indicated immediately that he would accede, probably in a statement to be issued through his Washington office tomorrow.

Taft is a member of the committee.

His political record, the resolution declared, "and the frank way in which he states his opinions on the great public questions of the day, all combine to make him a national figure of the first rank."

Although there was no immediate comment from him, friends recalled that the day after his election last November, Taft disclaimed any intention of seeking the presidential lightning bolt observed:

"I don't think any man should reject a tender of the nomination, once it comes to him."

The son of the late President and chief justice was Ohio's "favorite son" candidate for the nomination in 1936 but released his delegates as sentiment at the Cleveland convention swung toward Alfred M. Landon, then Governor of Kansas.

The resolution declared: "The government of the United States is rushing down a road which will end in inflation and may end in the destruction of democracy itself. Congress by itself may slow the rush toward disaster but it cannot stop it. It can be stopped only by a man of outstanding courage in the White House."

BUSINESS INDEX RISES.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(P)—Time Magazine's index of business conditions advanced this week to 95.8 from 95.3 the previous week. A continued high working capital ratio for the country as a whole, stoppage of deflationary money influences from abroad, and strongly rising spending in trade centers were cited as the basic factors in the rise.

Dig Hole To Cache Radium in War

LONDON, Aug. 2.—(P)—A hole 50 feet deep to be used for burying precious but highly dangerous radium out of reach of bombings in wartime, was completed today at Mount Vernon hospital, Northwood, Middlesex.

Dr. John Read, hospital physician, said 20 grams of radium, worth 100,000 pounds (468,000), would be sent there from neighboring hospitals in event of war.

"The reason for these elaborate precautions," he said, "is the tremendous lethal properties of uncontrolled radium. If 20 grams were hit by a bomb, the area over which they were dispersed might become a death trap for many years."

"The particles of radium, which if they had their maximum effect could kill thousands of people, would render the area uninhabitable."

Educator Tells Burns Club U. S. Will Evolve New Social Structure

Ramsey Declares 'Americans Aren't Going To Take It Lying Down,' and Predicts Victory for Democracy.

Education faces its greatest responsibility in doing its part to solve the problems of today, Dr. Ralph L. Ramsey, secretary of the Georgia Education Association, declared last night at the meeting of the Burns Club of Atlanta.

Dr. Ramsey said the "American people are not going to take it lying down," and predicted democracy will triumph in the end—that a new economy and a new social structure will be worked out to preserve American democracy.

Philosophy Accepted.

Dr. Ramsey said Dr. Ralph Burns' philosophy expressed in "a man's man for a job" is not only accepted today, but is more pronounced than ever. Democracy believes in giving every man an opportunity to achieve according to his ability, he explained.

"We face accepting democracy in reality or admitting it will not work," Dr. Ramsey said. "It is more at the test today than ever before."

Dr. Wightman F. Melton told the club that the poet, in his "Tree of Liberty," foresaw conditions in America as they are today, and Burns forecast that the "time is coming when men the world over will be brothers."

Robert Burns was a democrat but would not be a New Dealer, Herbert C. Reid, secretary of the club, said in a brief talk. Reid explained that the New Deal makes people dependent on the government, and Burns' idea was that man should be independent. Burns spoke of this idea in his "Address to a Young Friend," Burns would not oppose some of the things done by the New Deal, such as old-age pensions, but pointed out that old-age pensions have been in effect in Europe for 30 years, having been put into effect when conditions were good. Reid said the mistakes the United States has made was in instituting such a program during a depression, "when the patient was sick."

"We are beginning to reap now," he added.

The club voted to invite the Ladies' Burns Club to hang their certificate of membership in the Burns Federation on the wall of the Burns Cottage at the September meeting. The event will be featured by a basket picnic dinner.

MEXICAN OIL GRAB PROBE VOTED DOWN

Senate Committee Kills Proposal; Guffey's Name Not Mentioned.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—(P)—With Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, taking the lead, the senate foreign relations committee killed today two resolutions for an investigation of circumstances surrounding the seizure of American oil property by the Mexican government.

The committee decided unanimously, on Borah's motion, that neither of the resolutions was properly before it and that no facts were stated in either which justified an investigation by a special three-member committee, as suggested. It then voted to report both bills adversely.

The resolutions were introduced as the outgrowth of the action by Senator Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire, in reading to the senate last week newspaper reports linking the name of Senator Guffey, Democrat, Pennsylvania, with persons who negotiated the sale of oil by Mexico from the seized properties.

Bridges, who asked in one of the resolutions for an investigation of negotiations carried on for the sale or barter of the oil, said he might renew his proposal at the next session of congress.

The New Hampshire senator, who is not a member of the foreign relations committee, told reporters that he understood there had been "plenty of pressure from various sources" to block any investigation.

Both resolutions cited the newspaper stories but neither made any charges. Guffey's name was not mentioned in either.

MEDICAL JOURNAL DEFIES U. S. ATTACK

'Prosecution if Not Persecution' Editorial Calls Anti-Trust Action.

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—(P)—The Journal of the American Medical Association tonight charged editorially that the Justice Department sought to "undermine the confidence of the people in the medical action of Federal District Judge James M. Proctor, who recently quashed an indictment charging the association, three other medical organizations and 21 prominent physicians with violating the anti-trust law, and subsequent moves of the Justice Department, which filed an appeal.

TARZAN AND THE FIRES OF TOHR No. 136

On the next roof the fugitives dropped down behind a coping. Through a chink in the wall they watched. They saw a Tohran's head rise for a moment above the first roof, then disappear. "When he didn't see us, he probably figured we dropped to the street," said Perry.

"We can make our way across the houseposts toward the paddocks," Kalluk suggested, "without being visible from the street." "But we can be seen from the palace. If anybody happens to look out one of the windows, we're right in his eyes," O'Rourke groaned.

"In the palace, however, all eyes were turned fearfully upon the queen. Aheas was berating everyone about her, so furious was she at the miscarriage of her plans for the public whipping of Tarzan and his friends. Mungo promised to recapture the fugitives quickly.

"You are all children, you and your guards," Aheas thumped, "to allow them to escape. They are three; you are numbered in hundreds. I trust you no longer. My hunting lions will track them down. Go! Warn the people from the streets! Sound the gong! Loose the lions!"

Fulton Lateral Sewer Program Probe Pushed

Grand Jury Committee Sifts Charges of 'High-Handed Methods,' Costliness, Bad Engineering.

Testimony of such gravity as to require a further special session and "a complete investigation," in the view of a grand jury subcommittee chairman, was heard yesterday from 30 witnesses concerning Fulton county's lateral sewer construction program.

The witnesses, among whom were contractors and sewer experts, charged high-handed methods, coupled with excessive costs, poor management and poor engineering.

Determination was voiced by Edward McGonigal, chairman of the grand jury subcommittee, to summon to the forthcoming meeting "city and county purchasing agents, engineers and others."

He said the subcommittee would meet again Friday to set a date for further hearings and to prosecute plans for the complete probe.

"High-Handed." Mitchell C. Bishop, assistant superintendent of county public works in charge of sewers, and Clark Donaldson, city chief of construction, declared they would appear before the grand jury committee, if called.

Both said they did not know what the complaints were. A mass of figures and facts has been received by the grand jury committee "from authoritative sources," McGonigal said, and they will be used for comparison with records of the county sewer department.

Describing the testimony as "high-handed methods" by the county sewer department, McGonigal said witnesses testified that the county had run lateral sewers in certain sections without any petition from property owners, who pay the cost on a frontage basis, and that sewers had been begun without the property owners affected being advised of the county's plans.

Levels Changed. Commenting on the poor engineering charge, the chairman declared witnesses had said that in some instances ditches for sewers were cut 12 feet deep, then some time afterwards, back-filled to an eight or six-foot depth.

Meanwhile, houses had been constructed with an idea of tapping the lateral lines, but it was discovered that the lines were above the basement levels, thus preventing gravity drainage to a sewer for which they had been assessed.

As to excessive costs, McGonigal said the committee was told that quantities of building materials could have been purchased for less than the actual price paid.

Under an agreement approved in 1937 between the city and Fulton county, the city provides all engineering supervision for construction of lateral sewers, Bishop pointed out.

Records of his office showed that estimates of costs also were provided by city engineers and that actual cost of sewers laid

Fulton county commissioners yesterday revoked the first liquor store permit since establishment of liquor stores was authorized in unincorporated areas as a result of the plea of the delegation shown above as it appeared before the officials. Jere A. Wells, superintendent of Fulton county schools, who headed more than 100 citizens in the Stewart Avenue-Lakewood avenue section, is shown in the center of the group speaking. At the far end of the table sits Dr. Charles R. Adams, commissioner. Others seated about the table are Commissioner Troy

BOYS' INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL IS PROBED

Jury Subcommittee Also Investigating Public Works Camps.

A special and secret subcommittee of the grand jury is investigating conditions at the White Boys' Industrial school, at Hapeville, and public works camps in the county, to determine present conditions and seek rectification which may be required.

This was learned authoritatively yesterday. The grand jury in its action, is carrying out recommendations of its predecessor, which filed a sensational report on conditions at the boys' prison.

The purpose, it was explained, was to give prisoners opportunity for reform rather than to confirm them in criminal pursuits.

3 HELD IN COUNTERFEITING. AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 2.—(AP)—Alfred Grant, Ralph Jowers and Lucien Bouchard have been committed to jail in default of bonds, by order of United States Commissioner Charles Skinner, charged with passing counterfeit coins.

thus far were about 15 per cent less than estimates. "The figures we have show that we have spent only about 85 per cent of the estimates given us," he added. "That, to me, seems to be a pretty good record."

City inspectors are on every lateral sewer job during its entire construction. We have exceeded city engineers' estimates on only two projects, and on one of these the line itself was extended to account for the excess."

One hundred eighty-nine Indian tribes have voted for the reorganization act, which permits them to incorporate and function like business concerns.

Under the measure the foreign buyers would be required to hold the cotton in storage for at least four years unless a war emergency cut off their normal supplies of the commodity.

Commissioners also voted to revoke the first license it has granted for operation of a liquor store since they were authorized in unincorporated areas.

Following the appearance of a large delegation, headed by Jere A. Wells, county school superintendent, commissioners took unanimous action and decided that the license issued to Savas Creety to operate a store at Stewart and Lakewood avenues, should be canceled.

Action was deferred on a proposal by the city to take over all water lines extending outside the city limits into Fulton county. In many instances the lines were constructed by private parties. The matter was referred to the county legal staff for a recommendation.

Petition of Dr. L. J. Kepp to establish a cat and dog hospital on Peachtree road was denied, as the commission voted favorably on the adverse report of the county planning commission.

A petition by Leonard Levin to operate a liquor store in Center Hill was denied.

Commission Skirts Around Issue Of Liquor, Beer in County Parks

Move To Outlaw Drinking of Alcoholic Beverages in Fulton Recreation Areas Given 'Go-By' as Group Decides To Sleep on Problem for Present.

Liquor and beer in Fulton county's parks yesterday presented a composite problem too hot for the Fulton County Commission to handle at one sitting.

Troy G. Chastain, chairman of the parks committee, asked the commission to agree unanimously to outlaw drinking of any alcoholic beverages of any nature in the parks, but after some considerable discussion, the matter was passed over for "further consideration."

It happened about like this: Chastain obtained the floor to say: "Gentlemen: Some of the best people in Atlanta and Fulton county are drinking beer and not only that—liquor—in the parks. We have a rule against liquor, but I believe if we are to make the parks clean, wholesome places for the youth that all alcoholic beverages of whatever nature should be barred. I hope this commission will do it unanimously.

"We either should make that law, enforce it rigidly against everyone even to the extent of arresting persons for violating it, or we should not have the rule at all."

He then proceeded to relate how the other night he was called by one of the park supervisors who wanted to call a policeman because liquor was being served at one of the grills at one of the parks "by one of the county's leading citizens—and I mean leading."

Chastain said he asked the attendant not to take precipitate action, and nothing was done. "Action that is just what the commission did. They decided to sleep on the problem and try to solve it later."

GEORGE RAPS ANEW AT COTTON SUBSIDY

Urges Amendment To Bar Bounties on Exports of Unmanufactured Staple.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—(AP)—Senator George, Democrat, Georgia, renewed today his fight on the administration's cotton export subsidy program, offering as an amendment to pending legislation a proposal to prohibit bounties on exports of unmanufactured cotton.

He offered the amendment as a rider to a bill by Senator Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina, which would permit the sale of surplus American farm products to foreign nations for war reserves.

Byrnes succeeded in making his bill the unfinished business of the senate, but extraneous speech-making prevented debate on the measure or George's amendment.

An objection by Senator King, Democrat, Utah, had blocked unanimous approval of the legislation shortly after it was called up.

Byrnes told the senate his bill would permit sale of 175,000 bales of government-held cotton to France and Switzerland for war reserves.

Under the measure the foreign buyers would be required to hold the cotton in storage for at least four years unless a war emergency cut off their normal supplies of the commodity.

Commission Abrogates Fire Protection Contract With DeKalb.

Fulton county commissioners yesterday voted unanimously to join the state and federal government in the cotton export subsidy program, offering as an amendment to pending legislation a proposal to prohibit bounties on exports of unmanufactured cotton.

MOODYS FLYING ON FOR HEAVY RECORD

Light Plane Endurance Mark Set, Brothers Try for Key's Crown.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 2.—(AP)—The flying Moody brothers had their eyes on the 653-hour heavy plane endurance record to-night as they jounced through gusty air in the little monoplane which established a new light plane continuous flight mark last night.

Tonight the pair, Hunter, 25, and Humphrey, 20, had over 240 hours to their credit. The former light plane record was 218 hours, established a year ago at Long Beach, Cal.

The heavy plane endurance record is held by Al and Fred Keys, of Meridian, Miss. "That Keys record still is such a long way off we're not thinking about it too hard but we expect to get there," Humphrey Moody told Flight Manager Leroy Murphy by radio.

"Murphy, how long do you think this monkey will keep perking?" Hunter wanted to know.

"Turn it easy as you can. Sounds like it has a lot of time in it yet," the flight manager advised.

Murphy said the size of the ship and the inaccessibility of its 55-horsepower motor would be against the Moodys in an attempt on the heavy plane record.

"The Keys boys could stand up in their ship. That kept them from getting cramped and permitted them to take better physical care of themselves," he explained. "Al and Fred had a cat-walk on their plane and a motor which was out in the open. They could make minor repairs and adjustments. The Moodys can't."
